EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

ELOQUENT Tom Marshall will prove a tower of strength in the campaign.

THE next Governor of Pennsylvania will sign his name James A. Beaver.

GUNNISON, Colorado, has organized a national bank, with a capital of $50,000. Progress.

BOB INGERSOLL says that he likes happiness, but it is evident that he don't like Bliss!

FARMER BUTLER is all right. He has borne himself like a man, and lost none of the public esteem.

AN independent platform, an independent ticket and a particularly independent candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court, paves the way for a victory for which all can labor.

THE talk that New York and Boston will be illuminated by electricity generated by Niagara Falls is laughed at by Edison, although he is a man who will never be accused of underrating the possibilities of electricity.

THE present whereabouts of Guiteau's sister is a mystery, and testimony regarding her insanity is being taken in New York. Her husband, Mr. Scoville, states that he believes his wife insane. She has been detained and restrained her liberty by her brother, John W. Guiteau.

IT is stated that the representatives of a foreign syndicate are here for the purpose of purchasing oil. The oil fields of Germany and Russia have not yielded what they promised last year, and it is feared that they are about exhausted. The agents of the syndicate are instructed, it is said, to purchase fifteen millions of barrels. An early advance in oil will be evidence of their presence.

MR. GLADSTONE, with characteristic magnanimity, hastens to make known that among the heaps of testimonials of popular confidence and commiseration, a fair proportion come from Ireland. It is a happy token, and should bear weight in the final solution of the perplexities now overwhelming the heart and the brain of the sorely tried Premier.

WE find the following startling paragraph in a recent issue of the Bedford (Mass.) Bulletin: "On Sunday afternoon Mr. DeWitt, Clinton Fox and Miss Ida Fitch called at the parsonage and were there united in the bonds of matrimony." The writer may not have intended it so, but it will readily be seen from the above that three persons, two males and one female, one more than the law allows, have been united in marriage, which is probably the first case of the kind on record. It is to be hoped that such Mormon tendencies as this will be promptly checked in the old Bay State.

A PARAGRAPH in a recent number of the New York Tribune states that Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes received $8 a line for his poem on Garfield's death which appeared in the memorial number of the Boston Globe. We hope this is not true. We do not like to regard Mr. Holmes in the light of one who would accept pay for the privilege of dropping a few gems of thought on the grave of one whose tragic death was mourned at every fireside in the land. The opportunity and power to contribute that which would aid in keeping his memory fresh in the minds of his countrymen would, to most people, be sufficient reward for the labor spent.

A Great Day's Work.

The signal achievements of Wednesday, says the Philadelphia Press, makes the best day's work that has been done for the Republican party of Pennsylvania in a dozen years. The Convention rose to the full height of a great occasion. It displayed the same glowing spirit which quickened the party with moral power in its earlier days. It faithfully represented the Republican manhood and the Republican aspirations of our grand old Commonwealth. It made the strongest ticket, adopted the strongest platform, and did it all in the strongest way that was possible. The nomination of gallant General Beaver with one acclaim, his brave and manly speech, the broad and elevated declaration of principles, the spontaneous uprising for the lion-hearted, independent Tom Marshall, a complete ticket without a stain, the compulsion of good slates to meet a high demand, and the smashing of all slates to go still higher—all this makes a brilliant and auspicious opening for the campaign.

The unanimus nomination of Gen. Beaver reflects the Republicanism of Pennsylvania. The field has been fairly open. The effort has been made to bring out other candidates, but all in vain. General Beaver is eminently worthy of the great honor. He is a stainless soldier, a chivalrous Republican, an able lawyer, and an honest man. Above all, he is master of himself, and he is in full sympathy with the purest and most patriotic aspirations of the Republican masses. His trenchant and unequivocal speech put him on the high plane of independent action. "I have given no pledges," he exclaimed, "to any man. I will serve no master but the people," and no man who heard his fervid and impressive tones could doubt the sincere soldier and orator. His sinewy declaration rose to the highest demands, and when he meets the people, as he will, on every platform in the State, he will imbue them with the same faith which animated those who were yesterday thrilled with his eloquent voice.

The outburst for Mr. Marshall was a sudden and splendid inspiration. The Convention electrified itself as it will electrify the people. Mr. Marshal was named as Governor Dix was named in New York in 1872, as General Garfield was named at Chicago in 1880, by the spontaneous, irresistible and unerring instinct of a great assemblage which sometimes, in supreme moments, strikes through all veils, and sees, as with a lightning flash, the right thing to do. This was a grand thing in itself and grander still in the way it was done.

The ticket is strong in every part. The wrong to Senator Davies last year is atoned and righted this year. A faithful Republican, an honest and capable representative, he worthily and ably leads the independent Republicanism of Northern Pennsylvania. His public record is without stain, and his nomination by acclamation is a well merited tribute to a true and upright man. The selection of William Henry Rawle for Supreme Judge secures a candidate who is conspicuously fitted for the position and who answers the highest standard of Independent sentiment. His great legal learning will adorn the Supreme bench, while his type of bold independence will command the approval of the element in Philadelphia which must be respected. The remaining name, that of Senator Greer, will be acceptable for Secretary of Internal Affairs. All in all, it is a ticket which answers in a remarkable degree the demand of the hour.

GENERAL BEAVER cannot be said to be Cameron's man. With all the power in the counsels of the party accorded Cameron, he could not have prevented Beaver's nomination had he so desired.

THE second annual convention of the state constitutional temperance amendment association, which was held in Huntingdon on Tuesday and Wednesday last of week, remarks the Altoona Tribune, was a notable gathering. Although the weather was of the worst possible sort about three hundred delegates, representing forty-seven counties, were in attendance, and the spacious Presbyterian church in which the sessions were held was always well filled and at the evening meetings crowded to overflowing. Many of the representative temperance men of the state were in attendance, and though in the midst of so many thinking men there was of necessity great diversity of opinion, yet the work of the convention was transacted in order and with dispatch and the conclusions arrived at were generally accepted as wise and judicious. There was a conspicuous absence of friction and a general harmony which argues well for the future of the proposed amendment. The great learning and wise counsel of Judge Agnew, who is worthily closing an illustrious life by devoting himself to the advancement of this great reform, contributed much to the practical results achieved. The convention adopted a form of constitutional amendment and very wisely resolved to discountenance separate political action. The temperance people have planted themselves on good ground. They merely ask that the legislature give the people of the state an opportunity to decide by their votes whether or not the liquor traffic shall be outlawed here. If a majority of the people are of such a mind they ought to have an opportunity of putting themselves on the record and of incorporating their will in the constitution of the commonwealth. If the majority believe the liquor traffic to be right they will say so by their ballots and the question will be settled. But the temperance people have right on their side when they demand that a vote be taken and it is evident that they will eventually succeed.

A CHICAGO telegram announces that "the rapid growth of the milling of spring wheat in the northwest will soon compel the board to consider winter wheat as a speculative trade. If not, the importance of Chicago as a speculative market will be destroyed." There is something very touching in this announcement, but we judge that the consumers, the men who have to pay for the fun of the speculators, would be glad to hear that the importance of Chicago and of every other city as a speculative market had been destroyed. There is no greater infamy in this country to-day than the gambling in wheat and meat which keeps up the price of these necessaries of life and makes the life of the poor man often a joyless one.

THE brewers have been holding a convention at Washington in which they resolved that they will "overlook party affiliations and act together in defeating the candidate of any party that panders to fanaticism by supporting prohibition laws." That is right. Now let the people who believe in freeing our land from the curse of strong drink withhold their support from any party that toadies to the liquor interest and good will come.

THE Harrisburg Patriot has already succeeded in unearthing one dreadful charge against General Beaver. He is a Sunday school man. This is a dreadful thing from the standpoint of the Patriot, but it will scarcely do the republican standard bearer any very serious damage among the honest-hearted people who constitute the majority of Pennsylvania's population.

No nomination ever made for Governor of Pennsylvania has elicited higher praise and commendation from the press of all parties than that of Gen. James A. Beaver.

General Beaver's Speech.

Following are the remarks made by our townsman, Gen. James A. Beaver, before the Republican State Convention, in accepting the nomination for Governor of the Commonwealth, tendered by that body:

REPRESENTATIVES OF THE REPUBLICANS OF PENNSYLNANIA: I am here in obedience to your summons—in answer to your request. The committee of your body who have conveyed that request have also informed me of your action in naming me as the candidate of the Republican party of Pennsylvania for the suffrages of the people in the approaching election of a Chief Magistrate of our great Commonwealth.

I am not insensible to the distinguished honor which you have conferred upon me by the voice of this great Convention. The man would be strangely lacking in the feelings which are common to our humanity, whose heart could fail to be stirred by a pleasurable emotion in view of this action. And yet you will allow me to say, and will no doubt assent to the saying, that this nomination is an empty honor unless you fairly represent in its bestowal the free will and the untrammeled choice of your great constitutency. Did I not believe this was the fact, you could not prevail upon me to stand as the representative of the grand political party whose past history is the best guarantee of its future policy. If you do not believe this is the fact, I pray you concel this nomination here and now, and select some gentleman whom you and I can join in supporting as the true exponent of pure Republicanism, and the unbiased choice of a majority of the party.

I am not much of a politician; have but little political experience, and, consequently, lay no claim to the sagacity which large experience brings but I have faithfully and earnestly endeavored to learn in the preliminary canvass which has resulted in this nomination, what the wishes of the masses of the Republican party were in regard to it. I have not sought individual support, nor bargained for political influence, but I have been solicitous to know the popular will. Believing that you have registered that will and given utterance to the voice of the people, I accept this nomination—not boastfully, not unthinkingly, but under a keen sense of the responsibility which popular confidence implies and begets. I have carefully noted the instructions under which some of you have cast your votes to-day, and whilst I am painfully aware that I fall very far short of the picture of the man whom you were instructed to support for this nomination, I am, nevertheless, impressed with the fact that the people in many parts of the Commonwealth have set up a high ideal to which they expect the nominee of this Convention for the office of Chief Magistrate to attain. I cannot expect to reach the full measure of their high standard, but I will come only so far short of it as the ability which God has given me, backed by an honest purpose and an earnest effort, will enable me to reach.

I have made no pledges to ing man as to what my future course shall be. I can make none, now or hereafter, except this: In the approaching political campaign the harmony and success of the Republican party shall be the one great object of desire and effort on my part, and, if your action should be ratified at the polls, the welfare of the whole people shall be the prime object of my solicitude, their will my inspiration, and my highest aspirations to obey their commands as legally expressed. You will pardon these personal remarks, ordinarily out of place, but the circumstances under which we meet, and the evident misunderstanding of my position by many right-thinking people, render them not only appropriate but necessary.

And now, as to the principles which you have enunciated as expressive of the sentiments of your constituency. They are not only correct as principles, but they must be faithfully and honestly carried out in practice. They are not only beautiful as sentiments, but they must regulate and control the life of the party. The question for us is not, are they radical? but, are they right? They are right, and therefore we can advocate them, stand by them, uphold them, and insist upon their practical application in party government, and in the legislation which will give them life and efficiency. Public trust means public service. He who accepts it becomes the servant of all, and, in administering it, he enjoys most who serves the best.

This is not the time, nor is it the place, for the discussion in detail of the principles which you have announced as the matured thought of the party. If life and health are spared, I propose to carry the standard upon which they are inscribed into every county of the commonwealth, and with the aid of those who believe with me that they are verities, to bring them before every intelligent thinking man in the State. This standard which you present is the tri-color of harmony—of purity in party government—and, of prosperity of the whole people. And now as I take it from your hands, I pledge you, and I pray you to join in the pledge, that together we will carry it to a glorious and triumphant victory.

A Corner in Chinamen.

Now that the anti-Chinese bill is signed, the next thing in order will be for somebody to get up a corner in Chinamen. This will be a comparatively easy thing to do, for our supply of Chinamen is quite limited. In all the thirty years we have been importing this article our net importations foot up not much over 100,000. Supply and demand have comfortably kept pace with each other. If any large manufacturing concern now wanted a few hundred Celestials it would have to offer such high wages that the old charge against these people, that they worked for almost nothing, would be wiped out.

A sudden demand for a thousand Chinamen would be more than the famous Six Companies could possibly supply. But there is a way of getting out of the difficulty. The new bill is for ten years of exclusion The Six Companies have bought a bit of British soil on the upper Pacific coast, where immigrants from any part of the world can be landed. They can bring Chinamen by the hundred or thousand to the British Possessions and let them stay there for five years, during which time they can economically work their way. By this time the Chinamen will be at liberty to become British citizens. Having sworn allegiance to her Majesty's Government and procured their naturalization papers, there is nothing to hinder them from stepping across the boundary line and laughing in their great loose sleeves at us and our law. We may slam the door in the face of the Chinaman and bid him go about his business if he have any. But to turn away the subjects of her British Majesty is a department of the immigration business we may wisely let alone.

Operators wishing to get up corners in Chinamen should remember that we are, for at least five years, dependent on our present stock, subject to depletions by sickness and death; but at the end of that time we can, by making the most of adjacent British territory, have all we need to supply the shorts.—*Phil'a. The Old, Old Story.

"Surely, you will not be false to me, George?" and the bright blue eyes of Elaine Jenkin's look fondly up into the face of the man who bends over her so fondly, and whose words of love come to her troubled breast with the sweet, smooth restfulness that a tired man feels when the throbs of his aching head are stilled and the demons of pain driven away by the touch of a wife's hand and the sound of her low, sweet voice.

"No, my little one," replied George W. Simpson, drawing the girl closer to him. "I will never deceive you, never do ought that would give you sorrow or pain. You have made a better man of me—dragged me as it were, from the horrid maelstrom of draw-poker and 25 cent drinks into whose centre I was swiftly being drawn, and landed me on the beautiful Lotos Island of your love—the pure, trusting, passionate love of a heart that beats alone for me. Never fear my darling that I will leave you"—and pressing a kiss upon the ripe, red lips that could make a cake jar look desolate, he went out into the starlit night and started down the street car track, where there was no danger of being interrupted by vehicles.

* * * *

Ten years later.

Over the old front gate, thrown out of plumb so many, many times by George and Elaine hanging on to swap lies, the vines are growing. A little to the left is a grave, moss-covered and uncared for. Towser is dead. In the sun-kissed wood-shed back of the house a man is chopping wood. A woman comes to the back door.

"George?" she says.

"Yes."

"Supper's ready. Shoo the brats out of the alley and bring in some wood when you come."

"All right."

Heaven help them—they are married!

MR. AND MRS. PARMALEE of Red Oak, Iowa were not christians, but they took great pride in the fact that their son was a member of a church. He was expelled for bad conduct, and they were highly indignant. They gave the minister a severe whipping, and started to punish the deacons in the same manner, when a constable stopped them.

TO A San Francisco gentlemen who is collecting autographs for the benefit of the proposed Union Veterans' Home in that city, Jefferson Davis recently wrote: "You were not mistaken in supposing I would sympathize with an effort to provide for veteran soldiers, who, having served their country in its need, have come to need their country's service."

THE House of Lords has since Easter met at 4 instead of 5. The first day it sat twenty minutes, the second day thirty-five—justifying Lord Bath's prediction when it was proposed to meet at the earlier hour, that their lordships, instead of adjourning in time for dinner would now adjourn for 5 o'clock tea. The whole sittings for a week occupied about an hour.

ONE of her Britannic Majesty's Indian subjects has written a poem upon the recent attempt upon her life, in which the following lines occur:

A vile wretch, impelled by viler passion,
Had aimed exact a fiery ball at her;
Her royal breast did suddenly heave and hop;
The lustre of her face was lost, and it turned pale.
Cursed be he who did such wickedness practice
To peril the life of a female old, a queen.

MARSEILLES lately levied an octroi of five francs per hectolitre on Vichy water, as being used to mix with wine for luxurious purposes, by people who do not take it as a medicine Counsel for Vichy argued that it was exclusively medicinal, and read a letter from Mme. de Sevigne, saying that she found Vichy water very nasty, and it made her sick. On this evidence the court ordered the city to refund.

A CHURCH of England clergyman must perform the ceremony of marriage, unless he has very good grounds for suspecting that the license has been obtained by fraud, except in case of a divorced person, whom he is not bound to marry, but for whose marriage he must lend his church. Residence for fifteen days within his parish prior to marriage is necessary for the bridegroom. St. Andrew, Well street, where Bernhardt was married, is an ultra ritualistic church.

A PROJECT is under consideration at the French ministry of finance for abolishing altogether the bronze coins now in use. The substitute will be nickel, which is already in use in Germany and Belgium for coins of small denomination. The peculiarity of the proposed French coins, however, will be that they will be of octagonal shape, in order that they may not be confounded with the silver pieces now current. Models of the new 5, 10 and 20 centime pieces have already been struck.

THE death of Martin, the lion tamer, author of the "Memoires d'un Dompteur," is announced from Amsterdam. Unlike most men of his dangerous calling, he died a natural death a the ripe age of ninety, surrounded by his family. He was the first to introduce wild beasts into the Franconi Circus, and he was only once attacked by a lion during the course of his long career. His collection of animals became the nucleus of the Zoological Gardens at Amsterdam; and after officiating for some time as director of the Zoological Gardens at Rotterdam, he retired to cultivate roses in the little Dutch town of Overschie, where he remained to the day of his death.

Poetry.

A TREASURED RELIC.

BY CHARLES WHITE.

In my darkened room I'm sitting, as the twilight shadows fall.
Weaving webs of light and darkness on my humble parlor wall;
And the visioned past is rising, long-forgotten thoughts return,
While my wearied soul the present and the future seems to spurn.
All my little store of trinkets in my lap is lying now,
And I turn them idly over as I rest my fevered brow;
Recollection's rushing tide to me doth hosts of memories bring,
As I lift this shining band of gold—my mother's wedding ring.

Time will heal our deepest sorrows, blunt the edge of keenest woe,
Teaching many a wholesome lesson to us as we grow older grow,
Chastens all our earthly longings, bears the fairest prizes by,
Till our soaring aspirations scorn the earth and seek the sky.
Thus were all my young ambitions crushed and shattered one by one;
Clouds obscured my life's horizon, lurking shadows dimmed the sun;
Now her blessed teachings haunt me, to my bleeding heart they cling,
While I breathe a prayer above it—o'er my mother's wedding ring.

Now the tears are thickly falling—rising from a stricken heart,
Through the mists of grief I see her—may her image ne'er depart!
Best of friends, your loving counsel oft my wayward steps would guide,
Saved me oft from storm and shipwreck since I sailed life's troubled tide;
Deeper shadows hover o'er me and the stars are peeping out.
But the star of hope is breaking on my soul, dispelling doubt,
While a heaven-sent petition swift its upward flight doth wing,
As I place it in its casket; dearest mother's wedding ring.

DIFFIDENCE.

"I'm after axin,' Biddy dear,"
And then he stepped awhile,
To fringe his words the merest mite
With something like a smile—
A smile that found its image
In a face of beauteous mould,
Whose liquid eyes were peeping
From a broidery of gold.

"I've come to ax ye, Biddy dear,
If"—then he stopped again,
As if his heart had bubbled o'er
And overflowed his brain;
His lips were twitching nervously
O'er what they had to tell,
And timed their quavers with the eyes
That gently rose and fell.

"I've come"—and then he took her hands
And held them in his own,
"To ax"—and then he watched the buds
That on her cheeks had blown,
"Me party dear"—and then he heard
The throbbing of her heart,
And told how love had entered in
And claimed its every part.

"Och! don't be tazin' me," said she,
With just the faintest sigh,
"I'm far from blind; I see you've come,
But that's the reason why?"
"To ax"—and once again the tongue
Forbade its sweets to tell,—
"To ax—if Mrs. Mulligan
Has any pigs to sell?"

THE SCHOOLBOY.

We bought him a box for his books and things,
And a cricket bag for his bat;
And he looked the brightest and best of kings
Under his new straw hat.

We handed him into the railway train
With a troop of his young compeers,
And we made as though it were dust and rain
Were filling our eyes with tears.

We looked in his innocent face to see
The sign of a sorrowful heart;
But he only shouldered his bat with glee
And wondered when they would start.

'Twas not that he loved not as heretofore,
For the boy was tender and kind;
But his was a world that was all before
And ours was a world behind.

'Twas not his fluttering heart was cold,
For the child was loyal and true;
And the parents love the love that is old
And the children the love that is new.

Our Story Teller.

The Bachelor's Confession.

I live in a French flat. Of course there are objections to French flats. So there are to most things. I can afford a hotel, and I detest a boarding house. A bachelor of 30 odd, who has been at the mercy of boarding house keepers all his days can easily understand that.

So, when I engaged a suite of rooms—third floor in a French flat edifice—and arranged my household goods therein, with a fine look out over a green dot of a park in front, and the glimmer of a palisade far in the rear above a forest of shipping, I considered myself well off.

What is my profession? I haven't any in particular. I am an artist and draw a little, daily, in front of my easel; I contribute to the press, and write when the divine afflatus seizes me. I read the law when I feel like it, and draw a little income from a snug little property left me by an uncle in India. Consequently, I was able to decorate my new quarters very prettily with Bagdad rugs, old China dragons, black and gold Japanese screens, and pictures I had picked up at a bargain.

And when the fire was burning brightly in the grate, the first rainy May evening, the student lamp shining softly on the red, carved table, and the waiter from a neighboring restaurant had brought in my frugal dinner of a broiled bird, a mold of currant jelly, a slice of roast beef, and a raspberry dumpling, I considered myself pretty comfortable.

"Upon the whole," says I to myself, "I rather approve of French flats."

I rang the bell. The janitor, a respectfully decent sort of fellow, in a round jacket and carpet slippers, answered the summons.

"Janitor," said I, "who occupies the floor above?"

"Nobody, sir," the man answered. "Last party moved out yesterday. New party moves in to-morrow."

"A large family?" said I rather dubiously.

"Bless your heart, sir," said the man, "no family at all—singly lady, sir!"

At this I congratulated myself more and more.

"I shall have prospect of a little peace now, I think," said I; and I ate my dinner in a fool's paradise of happiness.

The single lady moved in on the morrow. She must have moved in when I was down town selecting some new mill boards and color tubes for the summer sketch I intended to make, for when I returned, fondly expecting once more to enter my kingdom of peace and serenity, everything was changed.

There was a banging and pounding overhead, a thumping and hammering—a sound as if some middle-sized giantess in hob-nailed shoes was enjoying herself in a promenade. I sent for the janitor in a rage.

"Is the house coming down?" said I.

"It's the new tenant a movin' in, sir," said he, apologetically.

"Does her furniture consist entirely of Herring's safes and square pianos?" said I.

"There are two pianos, sir," said he. "She's musical."

"The deuce she is,' roared I. 'Two pianos! And does she play 'em both?'

'Don't know, sir, I'm sure,' said the man, with a distressed expression of countenance.

I endured the noise until midnight and then I sent up the janitor's wife.

'The third floor's compliments to the fourth floor, and would like to know if this sort of thing is to go on all night.'

Down came the woman again.

'Fourth floor's compliments to the third floor, and wishes to know if he expects people to get settled without a noise?'

'The next day the piano—only one, however—commenced. I was elaborating a skeleton for a scientific essay, and it disturbed me seriously. I endured it as long as I possibly could, and then I had recourse once more to the janitor's wife.

'Third floor's compliments to the fourth floor, and will feel obliged if she will favor me with a little peace and quietness long enough to do some necessary writing.'

There was no reply and the music ceased abruptly. But that evening when I was beginning to solace myself with a little violin practice in the twilight, tap, tap, tap, came the janitor's wife at my door.

'Fourth floor's compliments to the third floor, and will obliged if he will favor her with a little peace and quietness, long enough to write a letter.'

How I hated that woman! So we lived for a month exchanging constant missiles of warfare. I could cheerfully have given up that miserable French flat and gone back to boarding, only unluckily I had engaged it for a year. The fourth floor elocutionized, and had friends to select private readings, whose voice was deeper than Hamlet's and more sonorous than that of Charlotte Cushman. She was charitable and had classes of heavy booted girls twice a week, to sing hymns and learn how to sew. A single lady, indeed! If she had been a quadruple lady she could not have made more noise, nor enjoyed making it more.

At the close of the month, however, an incident happened which changed the current of my whole life. I went to a picnic. I don't often go to anything of that kind; but this was an especially select affair gotten up by my friend Harold Webster. I went, and there I met Barbara Willis, and fell straighway in love with her. She wasn't exactly young, but neither am I, and to my taste a full blown rose is sweeter than a bud, wherever you find it growing. She was dark eyed, with full cherry lips, satin brown hair, and a complexion as fresh as roses and ivory. We talked; our ideas coincided exactly. It seemed as if our souls were two looking glasses, to mirror each other.

'Miss Willis,' cried I, 'why is it that we have never met before? I feel as if we were old friends.'

As I spoke I gently pressed her hand, and she smiled back unutterable things. I went to my friend Webster, who was making up quadrilles on the upper deck. We were accompanied by an excellent brass band.

'O, Harold!' exclaimed I, 'I can never thank you enough for introducing me to that angel!'

'Do you mean Barbara Willis?' said he. 'well, I do think she is rather a fine girl.'

We grew confidential as we sat together on the promenade deck and watched the moonlight ripple over the surface of the tides.

'A bacheler's life is but half a life, Miss Willis,' said I.

'I can readily imagine that,' she said softly.

'I live in a flat,' confessed I.

'Do?' said Barbara (the sweet old English name was just like her). 'Why, how strange! So do I.'

'Isn't it dreadful,' said I.

'Horrid!' said she, closing her lips as though she meant it.

'And there's a female dragon occupies the floor above me, and torments me out of my life.'

Well, if this isn't a remarkable coincidence,' replied Barbara. 'There's a detestable old crab of a bacheler under me, who takes all the pleasure out of my existence!'

'Shou d two lives be thus blighted?' said I.

'I—I don't think so,' replied Barbara, looking intently at the bouquet of pansies she held in her hand.

It was past midnight when the boat landed. Harold Webster came up.

'I promised to see you home, Miss Willis,' said he, rubbing his hands briskly.

'You need not trouble yourself, Webster,' said I, 'I shall be most happy.'

I called a hack, helped the divine Barbara in, feeling more and more as if I were walking in clouoland

'Where shall I drive to,' said the man.

'No. 69 Rovenal street,' said she, 'fourth floor.'

'What!' cried I,—'not the Fendanine flats?'

'Exactly,' said she.

'Why, that's where I live.'

'Are you the third floor?' she cried out, breathless.

'Are you the fourth?' I counter-questioned.

'But you're not a crab at all!'

'Nor are you a dragon. On the contrary—'

But what matters it what was said. Things were altered from the very beginning. I took my violin up stairs the next day and helped my divine Barbara out with a sonata o Beethoven's. I suggested a new educational theory for the hop-nailed classes. I listened enchanted to her recitation of Tennyson's Brook; and at the end of the quarter we are to be married—Barbara and I.

A Michigan Liar.

'Let's see, they raise some wheat in Minnesota, don't they?' asked a Schoharie granger of a Michigander.

'Raise wheat! Who raises wheat? No, sir; decidedly no, sir. It raises itself. Why, if we undertook to cultivate wheat in that State it would run us out. There wouldn't be any place to put our house.'

'But I've been told that grasshoppers take a good deal of it.'

'Of course they do. If they didn't I don't know what we would do. The cussed stuff would run all over the State and drive us out—choke us up. These grasshoppers are a God send, only there ain't half enough of them.

'Is that wheat nice and plump?'

'Plump! Why, I don't know what you call plump wheat, but there are seventeen in our family, including ten servants, and when we want bread we just go out and fetch in a kernel of wheat and bake it.

'Do you ever soak it in water first.

'Oh, no, that wouldn't do. It would swell a little and then we couldn't get it in our range oven.'

A Remarkable Success.

It cannot be denied, however, that Mr. Hilton began well. His first success was to receive a legacy of a million dollars from a gentleman who was commonly reputed not to be a very liberal giver. His next success was even more remarkable than this, since he exchanged this million dollars in cash for property the saleable value of which was upward of twenty million dollars. In the whole history of commercial transactions we doubt if there is a more remarkable exchange. Enormous wealth has often crowned the happy thought of some great financier in a single transaction; but the Rothschilds themselves never financiered with such conspicuous success as that.

An Easy Creditor.

The parson extended the box to Bill and he slowly shook his head. 'Come, William, give something,' said the parson.

'Can't do it,' said Bill.

'Why not? Is not the cause a good one?' asked he.

'Yes, good enough, but I am not able to give anything,' answered Bill.

'Pooh! pooh! I know better; you must give me a better reason than that.

'Well, I owe too much money; I must be just before I am generous, you know.

'But, William, you owe heaven a large debt than you owe any one else.'

'That's true, parson, but heaven ain't pushing me like the rest of my creditors.'

There was a crowd of carriages in front of a Woodward avenue church the other day when a man came along, discovered that something was going on, and leaning against a hitching-post, he asked of a pedestrian 'Was it very sudden?' 'I don't know. Presume it was.' 'Well, we've all got to go that way. Do you know, sir, that—that—' Here his voice broke down and he reached for his handkerchief. 'What's the matter?' inquired the other. 'Young woman's funeral in there.' 'That's no funeral; that's a marriage!' 'Marriage! Ah—yet—marriage—I see. 'Well, it's all the same to me. Give me the young man's name and I'll weep over him.'

A western editor offered a prize of $50 and a year's subscription for the best written proposal of marriage from a lady. He picked out a nice proposal from a beautiful and wealthy widow, answers it accepting the proposal, and, with the threat of a breach of promise suit, actually captured her. Editors may not acquire wealth by writing twenty-three hours a day, but when their genius takes the right shoot they procure the persimons.

We are gratified to learn that Rear Admiral Nichols will act as Secretary of the Navy during the absence of the Secretary. It would never do to leave our weak and puny navy a day or two without a protector. What would become of our country if our navy was to get lost, and the Secretary fifty miles away! It is hoped Mr. Nichols will not over exert himself and burst a blood vessel while he is acting as Secretary of the Navy.

Extreme Limit of Human Life.

Can man reach and pass the age of 100 years? is a question concerning which physiologists have different opinions. Buffon was the first one in France to raise the question of the extreme limit of human life. In his opinion, man becoming an adult at 16, ought to live six times that age, or 96 years. Having been called upon to account for the phenomenal ages attributed by the Bible to the patriarchs, he risked the following as an explanation: Before the flood the earth was less solid, less compact than it is now. The law of gravitation had acted for only a little time; the productions of the globe had less consistency, and the body of a man, being more supple, was more susceptible of extension. Being able to grow for a longer time, it should in consequence, live for a longer time than now.

The German Professor Hensler has suggested on the same point that the ancients did not divide time as we do. Previous to the age of Abraham, the year, among some people of the East, was only three months, or a season; so that they had a year of spring, one of summer, one of fall and one of winter. The year was extended so as to consist of eight months after Abraham and of twelve months after Joseph. Voltaire rejected the longevity assigned to the patriarchs of the Bible, but accepted without question the stories of the great ages attained by some men in India, where he says, "It is not rare to see old men of 120 years." The eminent French physiologist, Flourens, fixing the complete development of man at twenty years, teaches that he should live five times as long as it takes him to become an adult. According to this author the moment of a complete development may be recognized by the fact of the junction of the bones with the apopyses. This takes place in horses at 5 years; with the ox 4 years, and it does not live beyond twenty years; with the cat at eighteen months, and that animal rarely lives over 10 years. With man it is affected at 20 years, and he only exceptionally lives beyond a hundred years. The same physiologist admits, however, that human life may be exceptionally prolonged under certain conditions of comfort, sobriety, freedom from care and observance of the rules of hygiene.

Mollie Had a Little Ram, and How it Acted.

Mollie had a little ram as black as a rubber shoe, and everywhere that Mollie went he emigrated, too.

He went with her to church one day—the folks hilarious grew, to see him walk demurely into Deacon Allen's pew.

The worthy deacon quickly let his angry passions rise, and gave it an unchristian kick between the sad brow eyes.

This landed rammy in the aisle; the deacon followed fast, and raised his foot again; alas! that first kick was his last.

For Mr. Sheep walked slowly back, about a rod, 'tis said, and ere the deacon could retreat it stood him on his head.

The congregation then arose and went for that 'ere sheep. Several well directed butts just piled them in a heap.

Then rushed they straightway for the door, with curses long and loud, while rammy struck the hindmost man and shot him through the crowd.

The minister had often heard, that kindness would subdue the fiercest beast. 'Aha?' he says, 'I'll try that game on you.'

And so he kindly, gently called: 'Come, rammy, rammy, ram; to see the folks abuse you so, I grieved and sorry am.'

With kind and gentle words he came, from that tall pulpit down, saying: 'Rammy, rammy, ram—best sheep in the town.'

The ram quite dropped its humble air, and rose from off his feet, and when the parson lit he was beneath the hindmost seat.

As he shot out the door, and closed it with a slam, he named a California town—I think 'twas 'Yuba Dam.'

Lieutenant De Long.

Lieutenant George De Long, United States navy, the commander of the expedition, was born in New York city in 1844, and was appointed as acting midshipman October 1, 1861. By the ordinary course of premotion he was made a lieutenant in 1869. In 1878 he was appointed navigator of the relief ship, Juniata, sent to the Arctic to relieve the survivors of the Polaris. He was selected for the command of the expedition on account of his supreme fitness for such work. De Long was a man of fine appearance and splendid physique He was six feet in height, weighed 170 or 180 pounds and was of a vigorous constitution and athletic frame. One who knew him intimately says of him that he was a gentleman of charming manners and an interesting and brilliant conversationalist. He was an acute observer of men and things and in his travels had acquired a fund of valuable information. He took great pride and pleasure in his profession and was a close student and an industrious reader. His wife resides with her sister at Burlington, Iowa, and her father and mother live in New York. She has a daughter about ten years of age, and always believed that her husband would return, but she hoped against hope.

A scientist says that every adult person carries enough phosphorus in his body to make at least 5000 of the ordinary two-cent packages of friction matches. That is a scientific fact that is of very little value to a man who comes home in the night, smashes everything on the bureau in searching for a match, and realizes that all the 5000 match power phosphorus concealed inside of him will not light the gas.

A Pertinent Answer.

A man who travels on the railroad and sits down by the side of lone females while laboring under the impression that he recognizes a likeness in their faces to his wife's aunt's cousin, met his match on one of the roads in this vicinity lately. He sat down in the half of the seat, the other half of which was occupied by a pleasant-faced young lady. His first question was:

'Pardon me, miss, but is your name James? I have a cousin of that name, whom you greatly resemble.'

'No, sir,' was the reply, 'my name is not James. But pardon me, is your name Zinc or Copper?'

'Zinc or Copper? No, ma'am,' said the astonished man. 'What led you to suppose I had such names?'

'Excuse me,' was the quiet reply, 'but I thought you most be first cousin to a brass foundry.'

The man fell over two seats and kicked a bird cage half way down the car in his haste to get into the smoking car, while the young lady smiled a gentle smile behind her handkerchief. It was a proof of the old adage, that a witty answer turneth away bores.

Sharp Trick on a Conductor.

He mounted on one of the Jersey City and Bergen Slow Transit cars and tendered the conductor a trade dollar which had been punched and the hole filled with tin foil. The conductor looked at the coin a moment, and then, passing it back, said he could not receive that kind of money. It happened, however, that it was all the passenger had.

'If I take it,' said the conductor, 'I will have to charge you fifteen cents for that hole.'

'Charge what you please,' answered the passenger; 'I'm in a hurry and can't stop to argue about it.'

The conductor handed the man eighty cents change. The passenger counted it over, gazed at the man, then at the money, and said softly, 'Haven't ye made a mistake?'

'Yes, but I had to charge you fifteen cents for the hole in it.'

'That's all right. I've paid for the hole, haven't I?'

'Yes.'

'Well, then I want that hole. Give me that hole or give me fifteen cents.'

He got the money.

Saved: 'Isn't it delightful, Horace, to think of the awakening of nature, after her long sleep! A few weeks ago and all was buried beneath the cold, white blanket of winter, and the frost king held the life giving sap of the trees and flowers in his mighty grip. Now all is changed. The sun, with its penetrating rays revivifies the long dormant principles of growth, and in a short time—a few days at most—the earth will be clad in her spring suit of green, beautifully figured with dandelions and daisies.' 'Oh, Almira Ann,' said he, as he looked into her eyes a look of rapt admiration, 'if I thought you would always sling English like that I'—I'd—but then you might turn your language batteries on me.' A moment more he would have been lost, but his guardian angel did not forsake him.

There is one text that I always thought a settler for my teetotal friends until the other day—it is that in which St. Paul advises Timothy to take no longer water, but to take a little wine for his stomach's sake. A learned prelate was much of my own opinion, as you will see. 'I cannot believe, Mr. Spa,' said the Bishop, 'that under all circumstances it can be wrong for a Christian man to take wine, when the Apostle distinctly prescribes it to Timothy 'for his stomach's sake.' But the man of water was equal to the prelate. 'Hexternal application, my Lud!' says he. 'Hexternal application?' After hearing this the Bishop was speechless, grew pale, went home, drank aerated waters, rubbed himself morning and evening with champagne, and died.

Together they were looking over the paper. "Oh, my! how funny!" she said. "What is it?" he asked. "Why here's an advertisement that says," 'No reasonable offer refused." "What's so odd about that?" "Nothing" she replied, trying to blush, "only those are exactly my sentiments." If that young man hadn't taken the hint and proposed right then and there she would have hated him.

'Yes,' said the auctioneer, 'I know that man I have standing at the door and calling upon people to enter, speaks so thickly and indistinctly that you could more readily understand a brakeman. That's what I want. Folks will be curious to know what in the name of blazes he's talking about, and will come inside to see.'

'Where ignorance is bliss!' Paterfamilias (looking at the society medals, which he innocently supposes to be prizes for excellence in studies, etc.)—'That's right, my son. I see you are making good use of your opportunities here; keep on winning prizes as you have done and you may draw on me for any reasonable amount."

Some idea of the demand for coral that exists throughout the world may be formed from the fact that, from the bank near the little town of Sciacca, Sicily, alone within the past four years more than 8,874,000 pounds of coral have been fished.

Passenjaire—"Why is it that these street Arabs who catch on the cars have not been fined before?" Drivaire—"'Cause they've been found behind."—[Great laughter.]

Latin Prescriptions.

The Correct Reason Why they are Preferred to English.

"Did you notice the statement in an evening paper that physicians write prescriptions in Latin to save time, or in other words because the English would require more words and paper to convey the same meaning?"

It was a city physician who made the above remark and it was a PATRIOT reporter to whom it was addressed. The reporter answered, yes."

"Well, it is ridiculous, as every intelligent person knows," continued the doctor.

"It has that appearance."

"Of course it has, especially to all persons who read Latin. The proper reason why doctors write their prescriptions in Latin is because the language is the recognized nomenclature throughout the world. Even if not a spoken language it is written and understood in every civilized country, and that is more than can be said of any other language. An invalid traveling through many parts of the world might die before a prescription written in English could be interpreted. Even in this state there are many German druggists who cannot read English; they can Latin. Moreover, Latin professional terms are concise and definite. The Latin names for drugs and chemicals and in anatony are the same all over the world. Whereas the vernacular names differ in almost every country. A prescription written here could be used anywhere. If there is one thing in which doctors pride themselves it is on the recognized nomenclature among their profession."

"But the length of prescriptions?"

"They are not longer in Latin. That is a mistake."

The physician then gave several instances to show that it was a mistake.

Thrashing Othello.

A threatrical company was performing 'Othello' in one of the Connecticut provinces. Owing to the illness of the lady who played the role of Desdemona a local tragdienne was assigned that part. When she saw the enraged and foaming Moor advancing to murder her, her courage gave out, and hastily crawling under the bed she began to yell for the police. The chivalry of the pit was aroused. A sturdy young countryman mounted to the stage, and grappling Othello mopped him around vigorously, amid the applause of the boys. When he recovered his freedom and his breath, he explained that he didn't mean to hurt the girl, and was only following the cue of Shakespeare. 'All right,' replied the rustic champion, 'when you come around again fetch Shakespeare with you, and if he can lick me I'll treat.'

All Sorts.

Young men should be more like young ducks, and occasionally liquidate their little bills.

An old sailor was observed to be always hanging about the door of a church when a marriage was taking place. He explained that he liked to see the tide going out.

An advertisement reads: 'Wanted—A young man to be partly outdoors and partly behind the counter; and the Cleveland Leader asks: 'What will be the result when the door slams?'

A small boy, who was playing truant, the other day, when asked if he wouldn't get a whipping when he got home, replied: 'What is five minutes' licking to five hours of fun?'

THE Springfield Republican pardons young Belmont on account of his youth and inexperience, and at the same time congratulates him upon the advertisement his name has had by being associated with Blaine's.

Amateur printer—There's no regular pastry cook connected with a printing office, although sometimes when one of the hands makes a little pi he makes the foreman a little tart, and then, perhaps, the latter complains of being 'out of sorts.'

A gentleman in Rapides parish, Louisiana, cultivated one thousand acres of cotton last year, and four hundred acres in Bermuda grass. The cotton yielded him a net return of about $1,000 less than the grass. The cotton was cultivated with severe manual labor, while the grass was handled entirely by machinery.

AN Austin clergyman whose name we suppress on account of his sacred calling, was absorbed in thought a few Sundays ago, just before divine service began, when he was approached of the organist, who asked, referring to the opening hymn, 'What shall I play?' 'What kind of a hand have you got?' responded the absent-minded clergyman.

Rev. Arthur Annicesseed, of Utica, is a disciple of Wilde, and pronounced by his lady parishoners a very zephyr of poetic piety. His preaching is very delicate. Last Sunday he read a portion of sacred writ detailing a rehearsal of Jonah's submarine adventures. 'We come now to Jonah,' said Arthur, 'who passed three days and three nights in the whale's—ahem—society.'

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW'S WILL.—BOSTON, Mass., May 2.—Judge Brooks gave decision to-day at Cambridge which materially affects several bequests in the will of Henry W. Longfellow. The decision is that erasures which occur are to be considered no part of the will and also that the interlinesations are of no effect. This deprives each of the testator's brother's children of a legacy of $1,000 and makes void the legacy of $5,000 to his brother Stephen. The decision is based upon the ground that a will cannot be altered except by a codicil. The will was admitted to probate.

Feeding Pasture Land Early in the Spring.

Some farmers have an idea that they make a great saving by turning out to pasture their young cattle and sheep as early in the spring as possible for them to get a living. It is true by so doing they save their hay, but they lose more other ways than they gain in this. Sheep and cattle when turned out to pick up their living on short feed rapidly lose their flesh, and if the sheep have lambs that are young the lambs not only suffer, in consequence of short feed, but they also suffer by the sudden changes of weather. This alone would be sufficient reason for keeping them in the barn a few weeks longer. It may be said that the sheep may be housed nights and in bad weather, and that both the sheep and cattle can be fed enough to keep them in good condition. This is true; but there is another reason why it is not best to feed pastures too early, which is, by beginning to feed as soon as the grass starts, it is kept fed close during the entire season, because by close feeding early in the season the grass roots are so exposed to the sudden changes of early spring, and then to the scorching rays of the summer sun, that they become greatly weakened, if they do not entirely die out, and leave room for some noxious weeds that are always ready to occupy any spot that is not occupied by the grass.

Many pastures are injured by feeding before the grass has got high enough to show green. It is much better to keep both cattle and sheep in the barn until the grass gets well started. By so doing it gives time for the land to get well covered with growing vegetation. Thus protected, the land retains the moisture, and is kept in a condition to furnish good feed throughout the season. If pastures are not fed early it gives an opportunity to sow grass seed on the bare spots and get the young plants well started before the stock is turned in. When we understand how to better care for our pastures we shall not only keep our stock out until the grass has got a good start but we shall be as particular to manure them as we are now to manure our mowing lands, and thus we shall be able to keep more stock to the acre and keep them in better condition. How best to manage pasture is one of the important subjects which is now occupying the attention of intelligent farmers.—Mass. Plowyhman.

Americanisms.

A fashionable New York belle boasted, on her return from Europe, that while there she had some celebrated men at her feet. It is more satisfactory to employ a first-class chiropodist than to goad your brother to profanity when he uses his razor.

'Tell your mother I'm coming to see her,' said a lady on Austin avenue to Mrs. Gibson Bigelove's little boy, who replied: 'I'm glad you are coming. Mamma will be glad too.' 'How do you know your mother will be glad to see me?' asked the lady. 'Because I heard her tell papa yesterday that nobody ever came to the house except men with bills to collect.

Said George Eliot: 'Childhood has no foreboding, but then it is soothed by no memories of outlived sorrow.' You see, George never had any children, and didn't know. Where's the boy of ten who hasn't the memory of outliving the sorrow caused by the old man's trunk-strap when he put a wet sponge in the old man's boot that squirted water clear up the old man's leg. And hasn't the boy forebodings when he thinks the old man suspects him of putting tar on his hair-brush.

Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, is said to have a notion that faro banks ought to observe the same hours of business as other banks, and he has accordingly ordered them not to keep their doors open in the evening. He hopes to convince the sports that by attending strictly to their affairs they can accomplish just as much in eight hours as they can in fifteen or twenty, and that the gambler of the future will only keep his place open between the hours of ten and three. Mayor Harrison has some excellent ideas on the subject of gambling.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.
N. H. DOWNS'
Vegetable Balsamic
ELIXIR

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable: the discovery of which was the result of many years' close study, in order to discover the cause, the symptoms, and the cure—viz: Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—Consumption, at its commencement, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry; then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

CONSUMPTION

It heals the ulcerated surfaces and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the CAUSE, generally destroys the hectic before the cough is entirely gone. Consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions for cure of pulmonary diseases.

Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.

Dublin's Tragedy.

DUBLIN, May 11.—It is stated that as Right Hon. Michael Morris, lord chief justice of the court of common pleas, and Right Hon. Charles Barry, fourth justice of the court of Queen's bench, were walking in Phœnix park on Saturday, a few minutes after the murders were committed, and before they knew of them, a rough looking man said to the lord chief justice, "The chief and under secretary have been murdered; you are the next man spotted." Justice Morris believed at the time that the man was a lunatic, but he has since been absent from court, and it is thought he has gone to England.

LONDON, May 11.—A large and sympathetic crowd gathered at the St. Pancras railway station to-day to witness the departure of the special train conveying the mourners to Chatsworth to attend the funeral of Lord Frederick Cavendish. One of the most conspicuous features of the funeral was an assemblage of 5,000 tenants of the duke of Devonshire, father of Lord Frederick Cavendish.

DUBLIN, May 11.—Mr. Trevelyan, the new chief secretary of Ireland, and Lady Spencer have arrived here. The former was warmly cheered by the populace. Lord Spencer at the last moment decided to remain in Ireland instead of attending the funeral of Lord Frederick Cavendish.

DUBLIN, May 11.—Disappointment is generally expressed at the failure of the police to discover anything of importance concerning the identity of the assassins, and the feeling is growing that they have escaped. Mr. Trevelyan on his arrival, was met and escorted by mounted police. He had an interview with Lord Spencer.

NEW YORK, May 11.—In a cable dispatch received by Mr. Ford, of the Irish World, Davitt states that he fears a sacrifice will be demanded to satisfy the vengeance of the Irish landlords, and furthermore that he has private information that he himself will be the one selected.

LONDON, May 11.—The press association learns that Mr. Parnell has applied for and received police protection, owing to rumors which are current and to threatening letters which he has received to the effect that he is a marked man.

Destructive Fire.

WILLIAMSPORT, May 11.—The Keystone rubber company's works in this city were entirely consumed by fire at an early hour this morning. The buildings covered an area of three acres of ground. The total loss will reach $50,000, partly insured. The destruction of the works throws 200 employes out of work. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Washington Notes.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The president, at a late hour last night, appointed Major Garrett J. Lydecker, at present on duty in Chicago, to be engineer commissioner of the District of Columbia, in place of the late Major W. J. Twining.

The house committee on elections to-day agreed by a vote of nine against two to report to the house in favor of seating Mr. William M. Lowe, the contestant in the case of Lowe vs. Wheeler, from the Eighth congressional district of Alabama. The vote in detail was as follows: Ayes—Messrs. Hazleton, Wait, Thompson, Ranney, Ritchie, Jacobs, Paul, Jones and Calkins. Nays—Messrs. Beltzhoover and Davis. Mr. Atherton was paired with Mr. Pettibone, who was absent.

The house committee on public lands will, on Tuesday next, conclude the hearing of the pending bill which provides for quieting the title of Des Moines river lands.

The president has approved the acts for the relief of the heirs of Captain C. T. Dunham, for the relief of Andros Guile, Daniel G. Hutchinson, Francis Reichert, Elizabeth Fulk, Sally C. Mulligan, Mrs. Mary Shaw, Catharine Silney, Sally Hull, William H. Hill, John Watson and Eli D. Watkins.

The president sent the following nominations to the senate to-day: Postmasters—Sidney S. Condon, at Schaghticoke, N. Y.; Charles Munn, at Bergen Point, N. J.; A. S. Silliman, at Pottsville, Pa.; Lewis C. Smith, at Slatington, Pa.

The house committee on military affairs to-day decided to report to the house, with favorable recommendation, Mr. Beach's bill making a retired list for non-commissioned officers of the United States army who have served therein "continuously, honorably and faithfully" for a period of thirty years or upwards. Favorable reports were also directed to be made on bills as follows: Fixing the pay of hospital stewards at thirty-four dollars per month; allowing officers detailed on military courts reimbursement for hotel and other necessary expenses; granting the use of tents to the reunion of the Illinois veteran association, and several bills donating condemned cannon to associations in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Tennessee.

The house committee on the judiciary to-day directed its entire session to the consideration of the sub-committee's report favoring the forfeiture of unearned lands heretofore granted to southern railroad companies, but deferred action until a further meeting.

The house committee have completed the legislative and judicial appropriation bill.

Attempted Suicide.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Edward W. Kingsland, treasurer of the Provident institution for savings, Jersey City, shot himself this morning, by accident or design, in the trustees' room of the bank. The officials believe the funds of the institution intact, and have made a public statement to that effect, but a run has begun on the bank, which is surrounded by anxious depositors. Mr. Kingsland is trustee for a large number of estates in Jersey City and vicinity. The wound is not considered mortal. There are over 13,000 accounts, and the total due depositors is more than five million dollars. The assets are $5,791,833, consisting of bonds and mortgages, $3,000,000; United States bonds, $2,000,000; cash on hand and in banks, $150,000; call loans, $385,000, etc.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Edmund W. Kingsland, secretary and treasurer of the Provident Institution for Savings, who to-day attempted suicide in Jersey City, is to-night reported to be in a slightly improved condition. Dr. Lutkins, his attending physician, is inclined to the opinion that his act was caused by a morbid frame of mind, resulting from protracted ill health. The trustees of the bank to-night carefully examined the bank's securities and found everything intact. They decided to open the bank to-morrow and pay and receive deposits as usual.

Still at Large.

DUBLIN, May 12.—The police and people are beginning to discredit the theory that Irish-Americans were imported to commit the murder of Cavendish and Burke. This leads further to the deduction that some ribbon lodge was implicated in the crime. The great hope is that the reward offered will induce some member to become informer. One of the knives sold by the ironmongers of Dublin to some suspicious-looking person on Saturday was fully capable of inflicting wounds sustained by the victims. The knife was purchased shortly before 1 o'clock p. m. A discharged soldier, named Allen, arrived in Mill street from Dublin, last evening, and was arrested on suspicion.

Sergeant Mason's Wife.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Mrs. Betty Mason, wife of Sergeant Mason had an interview with the president this afternoon, and made a strong personal appeal for her husband's release. The president stated to Mrs. Mason that he has great sympathy for her and that the petitions for the pardon of her husband would be laid before the cabinet. Mrs. Mason was very much affected by the president's words and was so overcome with emotion that she could not speak. Her friend Mrs. Mary Shannon, spoke for her. The general impression is that Mason's sentence will be mitigated in a short time.

The Republican Platform.

The following is the platform of principles adopted by the Republican state convention:

The Republican party of the state of Pennsylvania in convention assembled do reaffirm the principles of justice, equal rights, honesty and economy in the national and state administrations upon which the party was founded and upon which it has long and continuously triumphed, and do hereby resolve,

That it has always been the aim and purpose of the Republican party to carefully guard the interests of the laboring classes by suitable legislation, and to that end the protection of American industry by advocacy of the continuance of a proper and judicious tariff is enjoined upon our senators and representatives in congress.

That as the sense of the great body of the Republican party of the staet of Pennsylvania we declare:

That we unequivocally condemn the use of patronage to promote personal political ends, and require that all offices bestowed within the party shall be upon the sole basis of fitness.

That confident and faithful officers should not be removed except for cause.

That the non-elective minor offices should be filled in accordance with rules established by law.

That the ascertained popular will shall be faithfully carried out in state and national conventions and by those holding office by the favor of the party.

The we condemn compulsory assessments for political purposes, and proscription for failure to respond either to such assessments or to requests for voluntary contributions, and that any policy of political proscription is unjust and calculated to disturb party harmony.

That public office constitutes a high trust to be administered solely for the people, whose interests must be paramount to those of persons or parties, and that it should be invariably conducted with the same efficiency, economy and integrity as are expected in the execution of private trusts.

That the state ticket should be such as by the impartiality of its constitution and the high character and acknowledged fitness of the nominess will justly commend itself to the support of the united Republican party.

That we also recommend the adoption of the following permanent rules for the holding of state conventions and the conduct of the party:

First, That the delegates to state conventions shall be chosen in the manner in which candidates for the general assembly are nominated, except in senatorial districts composed of more than one county, in which conferees for the selection of the senatorial delegates shall be chosen in the manner aforesaid.

Second, Hereafter the state convention of the Republican party shall be held on the second Wednesday of July, except in the year of the presidential election, when it shall be held not more than thirty days previous to the day fixed for the national convention and at least sixty days notice shall be given of the state convention.

Third, That we recommend to the county organizations that in their rules they allow the largest freedom in the general participation in the primaries, consistent with the preservation of the party organization.

That it is the duty of the federal government to adopt a policy which will result in observing good faith toward the aborigines by keeping intruders out of the Indian territory, by enacting laws protecting life and property on the reservations, by prohibiting tribe removals, by educating all the Indian children in manual labor schools and by giving lands in severalty, and eventualy citizenship, to all self-supporting Indians who desire the same.

That we most deeply deplore the loss sustained by us in common with the other portions of our nation in the death of President James A. Garfield, who exemplified, by his whole life and public career, all those principles which constitute the highest type of American manhood, and who, when stricken down by the hand of a cowardly assassin, showed by his fortitude and heroic patience that his profession that he was ready to give his life for his country was not an empty boast.

That we heartily sympathize with the widow and mother of our late President and his bereaved children, and we say to them that his life and memory are the richest legacy which could have been bequeathed to them.

That the administration of President Chester A. Arthur, commenced under such sad and trying circumstances, has proved to be wise, conciliatory and efficient, and is entitled to the cordial support of every Republican.

That under the administration of our worthy and able governor, Henry M. Hoyt, the affairs of our state have been wisely, honestly and economically administered; the interest of the taxpayers of the state have been carefully guarded, and his administration is worthy of the confidence of every citizen.

That the ticket nominated to-day combines purity of personal character with eminent ability, is worthy of the hearty and undivided support of every true Republican, and for its election we hereby pledge our hearty efforts.

That the state committee be constituted according to the usage of the party, the delegation from each district to present to the secretary of the convention the name of the person desired to be placed thereon.

Senator Mitchell for War.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Senator Mitchell furnishes for publication the following dispatch, sent by him this morning in response to a telegram from Major George W. Merrick, postmaster at Wellsboro, Tioga county, announcing the issuance of a call for a mass convention, to be held at this place May 20, to indorse the senator's position in regard to the Harrisburg ticket, and predicting overwhelming support of that position by the republicans of Tioga county:

WASHINGTON, May 13, 1882. MAJOR GEORGE W. MERRICK, Wellsboro, Pa.:

Right is mighty and ever triumphant. I have done all for peace, but war is inevitable; not upon men, but upon candidates who have lashed themselves to an unrighteous cause to curry the favor of bossism, machinism and the use of the spoils system, to bolster up a stalwart usurpation. I am against this everywhere and forever. It is a plain, patriotic duty to put down this stalwart oligarchy at any cost, that true republicanism and the republic itself may live and thrive. Organize! Organize! Work and fight to the end! JOHN I. MITCHELL.

No Chance for Guiteau.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Although the current report of a disagreement among the judges of the district supreme court in regard to the Guiteau case has been almost universally credited, there is good reason to-night for believing that it was erroneous. The Post to-morrow will make the positive statement that the four justices, after an entirely harmonious consultation lasting four hours, decided to affirm the sentence of the court. This of course overrules the exceptions and disposes of the Guiteau case.

The Cyclone in Virginia.

PETERSBURG, Va., May 13.—Additional particulars received here represent that the cyclone of the day before yesterday did immense damage throughout the south side of Virginia. Family residences, barns and fences were demolished, and huge trees uprooted. The cyclone was accompanied by a heavy fall of rain and hail, which did damage to wheat, young corn, oats, vegetation and fruit.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS

The Maid and the Minister.

A joke is circulating about Mr. W. I. Fleming, the tailor, and his force of female employes, in which a minister also figures. The young ladies of that establishment, being of vivacious disposition, often assay to demonstrate the playfulness of their natures in actions of one kind or another. The grand feat on hand at this particular time was planned by the young lady who arrived earliest after dinner. She stationed herself behind the door at the entrance to the room, instructing Mr. F., who is supposed to have a delicate sense of hearing, to inform her when her companion should arrive, that she might spring suddenly forward and frighten her. A light and gentle footfall was heard, the door was opened, Mr. F. gave the proper signal, and the young lady behind the door sprang forward, violently grasping the arm of the person who entered. Imagine the young lady's discomfiture when she discovered that it was a black broadcloth coat sleeve upon which she had laid violent hands, and that the astonished face looking down upon her was that of the pleasant young minister of the African M. E. church. Explanations and hearty laughter on both sides followed. Some people are cruel enough to insinuate that it is a trick of Fleming's to hold visitors long enough to take their measure. We do not credit that last insinuation, however.

—Two cigars a day purchased of Harry Green give more satisfaction than a dozen cigars from any other establishment.

Fifty Years.

Men are all advanced in life at fifty years of age. It seems to be a long time; but how long it must seem to a person who has spent that time in prison. On Wednesday last at 7 o'clock p. m. Charles Langheimer was released from the Eastern penitentiary after serving a long sentence. Most of his life has been spent in prison, altogether, it is said, about fifty years. He was in the Eastern Penitentiary when Charles Dickens, the novelist, visited this country in 1842, and reference to the prisoner may be found in his "American Notes." Dickens didn't visit Bellefonte and he didn't see Sechler's grocery store or he would have found a subject fit for his highest praises. He would not have taken the trouble to visit prisons, but in his inimitable style he would have said: "There is one specialty in which Americans excel the world, and that is in the excellence of their grocery stores. London, Liverpool, Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg and Rome all have good grocery stores, but never in all my travels have I met the equal of Sechler's. An inspection of it recompenses me for all the sea sickness which I suffered in the ocean journey. If I should describe a character to represent the model grocer Sechler would be the man of my choice. How fortunate the inhabitants of Centre county are to have such a grocer in their midst." We echo Dickens' sentiments.

—Says the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin: "Major J. B. Fisher, of Centre county, is favorably mentioned by some of his friends for the Legislature."

—A grocery and meat market combined, such as is kept by Sechler of this place, is a great convenience, enabling the buyer to procure all he wants under one roof without wearing out his shoe leather.

—At the meeting of council Monday evening a report was received from the committee on appropriations, allowing specific sums to the various committees of council for the prosecution of their work, but the measure was rejected by a tie vote.

—The best meat in town can be purchased at Sechler's meat market.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

THE beautiful new song, "'Tis No One But Me, Sweet Norah," is destined to rival in popularity any modern song of a similar class. It is by the author of "Somebody's Coming when the Dew Drops Fall." The concert singers and musical profession generally have already recognized its peculiar daintiness and exquisite sentiment, and ere long the delightful melody will re-echo in every household. Send for a copy of this sweet song. You will love it for its purity of sentiment and fresh pleasing melody. Price 40 cents. S. Brainard's Sons, publishers, Cleveland, O., and Chicago, Ill.

NEW MUSIC.—We are in receipt of an exquisite new song, with refrain, called "A Cradle Song," written by Rosabel, the celebrated composer. The words are very pretty, but the melody is the most soothing and delightful that we have heard for a long time, and it can hardly fail to subdue the most fractious infant. It is a song that anybody could listen to with the most pleasant sensations, and it will seem as if they could never tire of the delicious strains. Price of this song is 30 cents. Sold by S. Brainard's Sons, Chicago, Ill., or Cleveland, O.

THE Chatterbox, one of the very best magazine in the country, to juvenile minds, has added to its attractions by printing a brilliant colored frontispiece. This will no doubt prove a very pleasing feature to the youth who scan its pages. The Chatterbox contains a very good and interesting amount of literature. Published by Estes & Lauriat, Boston.

Surprising to Everybody.

It is surprising to most everybody what piles and piles of Clothing, Boots and Shoes are carried away from the Boston Clothing House, just opened in Reynolds' block, opposite the Brockerhoff House, Allegheny street, Bellefonte, Pa. People are to be seen at that house supplying themselves with Men's, Boys' and Children's Clothing, Boots and Shoes from every part and direction, from almost every town and village in this and adjoining counties. Bellefonte has never seen so many strangers coming into town as now since the opening of the great Boston Clothing House. It won't be very long until almost everybody for 50 miles around will be convinced that a visit to that concern even for an ordinary purchase will pay them well. The sales of that House since the opening are very large, and the low prices they are selling Clothing, Boots and Shoes for will make the Boston Clothing House in Bellefonte the leading place for Clothing, Boots and Shoes, and everything in the line of Men's and Boys' Wear. It has the facility for doing it. Don't mistake the place, the Boston Clothing House, just opened in Reynolds' Block, opposite the Brockerhoff House, Allegheny street, Bellefonte, Pa.

P. S.—We call your kind attention to the fine and elegant line of Ladies' and Children's Shoes which we sell cheaper than any place in the County.

FOR SALE!

To close up a partnership business the following

Valuable Property

is offered at private sale, located at Hannah Furnace, Taylor township, Centre county, Pa., ten miles east of Tyrone, on the Bald Eagle Valley R. R., leading from Tyrone to Lock Haven, being part of the original Hannah Furnace property.

Lot No. 1 contains about 123 acres of excellent Grazing Land, lying on the east side of the railroad, ⅔ of which is covered with a fine growth of young Oak, Hickory and Pine Timber.

Lot No. 2 adjoins No. 1 on the northeast, and contains about 180 acres of Grazing land, a fine spring of clear cold water, and is covered with Timber like No. 1.

Lot No 3 adjoins No. 1 on the west, and land of John T. Fowler on the east, and contains 180 acres, 80 of which are under a good state of cultivation, having a good a large Frame Barn, and other out-buildings thereon erected, with a well of good water at the door, and a nice orchard of young apple trees just coming into bearing. The balance of the lot is covered with young Chestnut, Oak and Pine Timber.

Two Story Frame House,

Lot No. 18 adjoins No. 3 on the west, contains 190 acres. 25 or 30 acres are an old improvement, containing some fruit trees and a spring of water. The remainder is covered with a fine growth of young Chestnut, Oak and Pine Timber, and some Saw Timber. A small stream of water passes through it.

Lot No. 8 adjoins No. 18 on the east and land of Samuel Hoover on the north-west. Contains 140 acres of good land, and is covered with young Timber and Hemlock and Pine Saw timber. A public road passes along the south end of the lot. A good sized run passes through it.

Lot No. 12 adjoins No. 8 at the north-east corner, and land of Stephen McMonagle's heirs on the south and east, and contains about 210 acres, most of which is good farm land, and is covered with young Timber and three or four hundred thousand feet of Oak and Pine Saw Timber, and is all easy of access

Lot No. 7 is about ¼ of a mile east of No. 8 and adjoining land of Christian Reese on the south-west, and contains 200 acres, more or less, one improvement of four or five acres with a nice lot of bearing apple trees, from six to eight hundred thousand feet of Oak, Hemlock and Pine Saw Timber, also Bark and Cordwood.

There are also about 50 acres at Hannah Furnace Station, laid out in some of which are sold and occupied. Ample opportunity and facilities are here offered for Farming, Manufacturing, and for capital seeking investment. A great quantity of young timber on this property is 18 or 20 years old, and fast increasing in value.

—Two valuable farms, one house and four lots, the property of Elias Zimmerman, are offered for sale on the 15th, 16th and 17th of June. The first farm is located five miles south of Bellefonte, contains 184 acres, most of it in a high state of cultivation, and a fine orchard. The second farm is located 4½ miles east of Bellefonte, also in a good state of culivation, and underlying it is a rich abundance of pipe ore. A beautiful residence and four lots in Milesburg will also be sold together. These properties are all subject to private sale at any time, and if not so disposed of before the 15th of June, will be sold at public sale as follows: Farm No. 2, June 15, on the farm; No. 1, June 16, on the farm, and the residence and lots, June 17, on the premises. A postal card addressed to John F. Potter, Esq., of this place, will secure any further information that may be desired.

—Emerson, the dead philosopher, did not approve of the superlative, but nevertheless we are of opinion that Harry Green's cigars are superlatively excellent.

—Each May the fair flowers their sweet fragrance cast, but our May of life is the first and the last. The swallows fly forth to return in the spring, and with their returning sweet melody bring; the flowerless valley blooms bright as before—when our loved ones leave they return, never more. If that is the case it is best not to allow your loved ones to leave, and they will stay with you much longer than usual if you will be extremely careful to purchase all your groceries at Sechler's store. May is a very favorable month in which to purchase groceries. It is then that you make your first rhubarb pie and strawberry shortcake, and if these delicious articles of diet are tempting to the palate they must be compounded of the best groceries—such as can be found only at Sechler's store. What we say in this regard is of the utmost importance. Physical health, peace of mind, and many things that we hold most dear depend upon our actions in this life. We Americans are peculiarly subject to dyspepsia and all the horrors which that disease produces. Much of it is owing to the fact that our victuals are not cooked properly, and the housewife will take pride in excellency in her work if she has good groceries. Remember the place is Sechler's store, in the Bush House row.

Grand Display of an Entire New Stock of Goods at Prices that defy competition.

There having been such an unsettled feeling among Importers and Manufacturers of late, we have been especially exacting in the purchase of our NEW STOCK.

Having been connected with a large wholesale business for many years in New York gives us an advantage over many others in the purchase of goods.

Having watched with an eagle eye every opportunity, and whenever a concession has been offered, we have taken advantage of it and pitched in.

By marking every article in plain figures and at uniform percentage above cost, our customers always derive the benefit of every bargain that we obtain.

Every Department is now Complete.

THE LATEST NEWS.

The Republican Convention.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—At 11.23 Chairman Cooper called the convention to order without any unnecessary remarks and also announced the officers of the convention.

The roll of delegates was then read by the secretary of the convention.

A letter from the conference committee was then read in which they reported the resolutions adopted by both committees, with a request that the convention take action upon them.

On motion of Mr. Rutan they were referred to the committee on resolutions.

On motion of Mr. Mullen, of Cumberland county, W. S. Kirkpatrick, of Northampton county, was unanimously elected chairman pro tem.

Mr. Mullen then named for secretaries B. Ransley, of Philadelphia; Fox, of Berks; Atcheson, of Washington, and Christy, of Allegheny.

Mr. McCreary, of Erie, moved that a committee of nine be appointed on credentials, which was agreed to, and the committee was appointed by the chair.

On motion a committee of one from each senatorial district was appointed on permanent organization.

The convention then took a recess until 2.30 o'clock.

Afternoon Session.

The convention was called to order by chairman pro tem. Kirkpatrick at 3.11 o'clock.

The committee on permanent organization made a report with Hon. George Lear as permanent chairman.

The report of the committee was then agreed to as read.

Hon. Wm. Lilly and Hon. D. Taggart then conducted the Hon. Geo. Lear to the chair, when he assumed the duties of permanent president.

A vote of thanks was then passed for the manner in which Mr. Kirkpatrick presided over the deliberations of the convention temporarily.

Mr. James Milliken nominated General Beaver in the following stirring speech:

MR. CHAIRMAN:—The Republicans of our state, with unusual and hearty unanimity, have done their part towards nominating one of our most distinguished citizens as a candidate for the office of Governor, and I have the honor of having been designated to present his name to the consideration of this Convention.

The story of his life, his accomplishments, his achievements,—together with my personal knowledge of his great worth—have so endeared him to my heart that I almost fear to trust myself to speak lest you may think my heart has got the better of my understanding.

He, of whom I speak, sprang from that stock of hardy, law-abiding, God-fearing men, who, within our State, have left their impress alike upon natures rude forms, upon the laws of our Commonwealth, upon the religious faith of the people, and faithfully has he kept pure his inheritance. [Applause.]

An orphan at three years of age, and, although denied the advantages of wealth, a graduate of college at nineteen, and ere he attained to years of manhood qualified for the practice of law; with the same rapidity pushing forward in all things that his hands found to do; foremost in the organization of every good work which aimed at the welfare, the prosperity and the peace of society, he reached his majority in the vigor of health, full of ambition and hope, without reproach or stain, and ready for life's conflicts.

Within two short years from this period of his life war's dread alarms are sounded throughout our land. Neighbor meets neighbor with the startling enquiry—who can go? Those too young must not, those too old cannot, some are ill equipped, and some, alas, will not. But our hero, scholar, soldier, friend, makes answer, 'Ready! aye ready!' [Great applause.] His magnetic impulse sways the judgment and the emotions of men, and soldiers, brave and loyal as the world ever knew, crowd around him to fill the ranks of his command. From out the workshop, from off the farms, from the slopes of our grand mountains they come and join him. The shrill fife, the rattling drum, his word of command, stir all hearts, and with words of cheer—amidst voices of fervent prayer, forgetful of their own sacrifices, confiding their near and dear ones to those who remain behind—they are off to the war. [Applause.]

His record in the war has become a part of our times, it had entered into and become a part of the history of our country. You all do know it well. He came back to us a mained soldier; his brother and many other of his comrades sleep

"Where glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead," and to all we owe more of honor than the living can ever repay.

The people who have sent us here demand that he whom they claim as one of themselves shall be our standard bearer in our coming political contest. They know that one so well tried we can well trust. He is from the people and stands in their behalf. He knows no faction of party, he will approve no measures save such as are clearly for the best interests of the whole people and of the commonwealth. Eminent in his profession, bold in the hour of trial, fearless in the face of danger, pure of purpose, honest in every impulse, I name to you the citizen soldier, General James A. Beaver for Governor of Pennsylvania. [Great demonstration.]

General Beaver was then, upon motion of Mr. Milliken, unanimously nominated for governor.

The convention then proceeded to nominate a candidate for supreme judge.

Silos W. Pettit then told the convention that he desired to present to the delegates the name of one of Philadelphia's most eminent lawyers, Wm. H. Rawle.

Charles S. Graham then placed before the convention the name of M. Russell Thayer.

Mr. Brosius named John B. Livingston, of Lancaster.

Mr. Dalzell, of Allegheny county, then named Hon. A. M. Brown for supreme judge.

Mr. V. G. Robinson desired to present Delaware county's candidate for judge and in doing so would nominate a man who was in every way qualified and fitted for the high position of supreme judge.

Little Delaware presented the name of Hon. Thomas J. Clayton and asked for him the support of the convention.

Wm. Nesbit (colored) named Hon. S. S. Blair for supreme judge.

Nominations were then closed and the convention proceeded to ballot, with the following result:

First ballot, Rawle, 115; Thayer, 38; Brown, 72; Livingston, 15; Blair, 4; Clayton, 6.

Second ballot, Rawle, 132; Thayer, 8; Brown, 97; Livingston, 14

On motion of Wm. Leeds the nomination was made unanimous.

James S. Rutan moved W. T. Davies' unanimous nomination for lieutenant governor, and it was agreed to.

For secretary of internal affairs: John M. Greer, J. L. Christman, Lucius Rogers, Cyrus G. Beale, J. G. Hutman and A. C. Boyle were named. The first ballot resulted in the selection of Greer by the following vote: John F. Greer, 129; T. L. Curistman, 24; Lucius Rogers, 57: Cyrus G Beale, 6; J. G. Heilman, 30; A. C. Boyle, 2.

Greer's nomination was made unanimous.

The convention then proceeded to nominate a congressman-at-large.

Hon. S. F. Butler, of Chester, James S. Bierly, of Lehigh, Hon. Thos. M. Marshall, of Allegheny, J. S. Van Voorhees, George L. Hough, J. Q. A. McConkey, of York, E. D. Lockwood, of Philadelphia, General Wm. Lilly, of Carbon, and James E. McFarland were placed in nomination.

The convention then proceeded to a vote when Butler received 64 votes and Marshall 176.

On motion of Mr. Hayes, of Chester, the nomination was made unanimous.

General Beaver spoke in response to repeated calls and the convention adjourned.

The Right Direction.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The war department is negotiating with the Mexican authorities with a view to allowing the troops of either government while in close pursuit of hostile Indians to cross the border line to a limited extent. The correspondence already had on this subject has virtually resulted in the tacit understanding that officers commanding the troops on adjoining territory can take such steps to secure the desired privilege as will be mutually advantageous to both governments without infringing on the rights of either.

Heavy Suit.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Yesterday a motion was made in the supreme court to set aside the summons upon the ground of irregularity in the suit brought by A. Orlando Jackson against the Louisiana state lottery company. The plaintiff brings the suit to recover $178,000, being double the amount which he claimed to have invested with the defendant company in lottery tickets during the past few years. Decision on the motion was reserved. The action is brought upon the statute making lottery selling illegal and which provides that the purchaser can recover double the amount invested.

A Disastrous Railroad Wreck.

CHICAGO, May 9.—A Dallas, Texas special reports a disastrous wreck, caused by a washout, on the Waco Branch of the Texas Central railway on Sunday night. A freight train went through a bridge, killing the fireman and two brakemen, and badly scalding the engineer and two other men. The point is remote and the railroad officials are reticent.

A little later the same evening, there was another wreck on the same road, which was attended by the death of one man and the wounding of several others. This was also caused by a washout.

A Terrific Explosion.

ALBENTOWN, Pa., May 10.—Six large pots containing chemical mixtures used in the manufacture of powder exploded with terrific force at the powder works in the Lehigh mountain near this city this afternoon. Two frame buildings were shattered and window glass was broken in houses some distance away. The explosion was anticipated by the employes, who made their escape. The works belong to H. C. Welch, of New York.

My daughter had a very weak back. Peruna cured her. John Orgill, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Guiteau Case.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The argument upon the bill of exceptions in the Guiteau case was begun this morning before the judges of the supreme court of the district sitting in banc, Chief Justice Carter presiding, and Justices MacArthur, Hagner and James. Colonel Corkhill and Davidge appeared for the government and Reed for Guiteau. Reed, after a brief opening, passed to the question of the jurisdiction of the court below, arguing that the crime was not indictable in this district, because the offense was not completed here, the mortal stroke having been given here, while death occurred in New Jersey. Chief Justice Carter interrupted at one point to suggest that while murder was the killing of a person, and the crime could not be defined as murder until death occurred, yet an act of felony was completed when the murderer had finished with his victim.

Counsel proceeded to discuss various authorities upon the subject of jurisdiction in brief. Counsel admitted Guiteau might be indicted, and if found to be sane convicted of assault with intent to kill, but held he could not be tried for murder.

Mr. Reed argued that the sentence of death was void, because the day fixed for the execution of the sentence is not authorized by law, claiming that under a proper construction of the statutes of the district the date of the execution should have been fixed for some day within thirty days after the fourth Monday in October, 1882.

At 1:30 the court took a recess until to-morrow.

Cuticura

THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER

Resolvent

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face, and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now soft and smooth as an infant's with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.

Reported by F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.

REV. DR.——, in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS

—We hear that Mr. John Eckley, of this place, is quite ill with a dropsical affection.

—Mr. Jacob Valentine is making improvements in the interior of his High street residence.

—Lock Haven whiskey is worse than an orange peel in laying a man flat on the pavement.

—The grand council of the Red Men of Pennsylvania convened at Williamsport on Tuesday.

—Cayenne pepper sprinkled over cabbage leaves is said to be a certain exterminator of cabbage worms.

—The national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held in the city of Baltimore in June.

—James H. Rankin, Esq., of this place, has been in attendance on the sessions of Clinton county court this week.

—In consequence of the recent heavy rains, the price of milk in Williamsport is falling to six cents per quart.

—The best beefsteak sells for 30 cents per pound in Philadelphia and Pittsburg. We are satisfied with the price in Bellefonte.

—Shad mount upward in price as they ascend the river, reaching an altitude of 50 cents apiece when they arrive at this place.

—Now that Bellefonte is increasing in population, the initiatory arrangements should be made toward the erection of a grand opera house.

—Licenses were refused all the hotels in Wellsboro, Tioga county, and the hotel proprietors immediately closed their doors against transient boarders.

—The Huntingdon Semi-weekly News says that "it is rumored that ex-Governor Curtin has purchased the furnace at Mill Creek, Huntingdon county."

—The first of a series of entertainments for the benefit of the "piano fund" of the Y. M. C. A. will be given on the evening of the 25th inst. or the first of June.

—The Lock Haven school board has forbidden the practice of publicly bestowing presents upon graduates at commencement exercises of the schools of that city.

—The Bellefonte Academy is a large building, and would appear much more cheerful if there were thirty or forty boarding students constantly in attendance.

—The Vigilant fire company of Altoona will invite the Undine company of this place, to be their guests on the Fourth of July. Perhaps the invitation has already been received.

—The B. E. V. R. R., says the Lock Haven Daily Journal, is the best feeder to the P. & E. In fact for some time past, more freight has come over the Valley Road than over the entire line of the P. & E. west of Lock Haven.

—A public Red Men's parade took place in Williamsport Tuesday and the people of that city were not at all terrified, notwithstanding the editor of the Watchman shakes in his boots at the mere mention of a Red man coming to Bellefonte.

—The committee who have been making efforts to secure the services of Dr. W. O. Perkins for a musical convention request us to announce that they have just been informed, by telegram, that the Doctor has been compelled to cancel his engagement.

—John J. Kohn, a member of the Williamsport police force, arrived in this place Wednesday and arrested Edward McAlister, alias Barney, an employe in the rolling mill of the nail factory. The charge upon which he was arrested is of a serious nature —Farmers in this vicinity should make haste to plant potatoes, as very excellent specimens of this farinaceous tuber are already in the Bellefonte market. We also saw some fine solid heads of cabbage last Thursday morning, to which the guests of the Garman House will be treated during the next few days.

—The committee having in charge the repast to be given the members of the Y. M. C. A., next Tuesday evening, strenuously object to terming it a supper, and have unanimously adopted another appellation. Those who call it by any title other than a "social lunch" will not be permitted to partake of the elaborate bill-of-fare to be offered on that occasion.

—The announcement that Gen. James A. Beaver has received the nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania is not received with unmixed joy by the General's family. They are all highly refined and domestic in their tastes and will seriously object to having their delightful and beautiful home life in Bellefonte interrupted by a four years' residence in the State Capital.

The Late Rev. Horatio Harrison Hewitt.

A friend sends us a copy of the Living Church, one of the representative publications of the Episcopal denomination, containing a very long and excellently written obituary notice of the late Rev. Horatio Harrison Hewitt, father of Rev. John Hewitt of this place. It would be interesting reading to the many admirers of Mr. Hewitt, but it is too long for publication in full.

It begins his life a half century ago, when at the death bed of his older brother in England he sacredly promised to consecrate his life to his Master. His father died suddenly, and unable to pursue a university course, he came to America, continuing his studies under the superintendance of "an aged uncle, a learned scholar, who in exile had taken a valuable library."

"In 1857, the late Bishop Ives performed his last Episcopal act in laying his hands upon and admitting to the diaconate of the church of God, Horatio Harrison Hewitt, of Sheffield, England. The young deacon, who could tell of noble ancestors who even had entertained royalty in their halls, gave himself up in this new land, to the work of the sacred ministry and entered upon the holy office with all his heart and strength."

"As a deacon, Mr. Hewitt served in Wadesboro, N. C. In one year, Bishop Atkinson performed his first official act in giving to this deacon the priesthood's commission; passing over in his own person, thus, that sad gap in the Episcopate of North Carolina."

From this period until the late civil war he ministered to the church in Lincolnton and Charlotte, St. Paul's church, Baltimore, and St. John's church, Jacksonville, Fla.

"During the war, the city of Jacksonville being captured and recaptured by both armies in the conflict, Mr. Hewitt and his congregation suffered indescribable miseries known only in war. His household goods and a valuable library were lost, and his devotion to his priestly duties, especially to the sick and suffering, seemed to make him the mark of soldier's vengeance from both sides, strange as it may seem. For ministering as a priest of God to the confederate sufferers, he was turned out of his home by the Union soldiers, and while burying the dead of the Union army he was fired upon by the confederate guerillas. At last, hunted for his life, with his family he was secreted by a friend, a Union officer, on board a government ship of war, and reached in safety the refuge of Baltimore."

After this he ministered to a church in Baltimore, spent four years as rector of St. John's chapel, Boston Highlands; six years as a rector of the church at Sunbury, Pa.; a brief ministerial service in the diocese of Pittsburg, and concluded his ministerial labors in St. Paul's church, Clay City, Kansas. In all places he was eminently successful. Twice during this period he was overtaken by what was supposed at the time to be a fatal illness.

Mr. Hewitt was a man of unusual devotion to purpose, of heroic bravery and of most chivalric charity. He could calmly read the liturgy at the open grave of a soldier, when he knew the rifle was drawn upon him. He literally bared his breast before the pistol pointed by an enraged parishioner who had been faithfully warned by him that—"It is not lawful for thee to have another man's wife"—and the pistol dropped.

Many other equally wonderful reminiscences are told of the noble man. His entire life was a lesson to all who endeavor to live devoted lives.

A Beaver Club.

When the news of General Beaver's nomination was received in this place on Wednesday afternon several of the most enthusiastic and intimate friends of the successful candidate repaired to the office of John I. Rankin, Esq., and organized a Beaver club, with the intention of making it the first Beaver club in the State. Wm. Shortlidge, Esq., was elected President, and W. F. Reeder, secretary. On motion, a committee of five was appointed to draft rules and by-laws to govern the future proceedings of the club.

The members of the committee are James H. Rankin, A. A. Dale, John G. Love, John T. Johnston and S. D. Ray.

It was moved and seconded that Messrs. Reeder, Harris and Rankin be appointed a committee to telegraph the organization of the club to the associated press and to the convention.

TESTED AND FOUND WORTHY.

In order to bring more fully before the notice of the people the value of a true and tried remedy, we give the following reliable testimonial from one of the many who have been cured, and whose reputation for veracity cannot be questioned.

WOODBURY, N. J., March 20, 1882.

SWEDISH BITTERS CO.:

GENTLEMEN.—I have suffered with dyspepsia and its horrible effects for many years. Have spent hundreds of dollars with physicians and in patent medicines, with no avail. I have been unable to eat meats of any kind, and could not retain water on my stomach, and was unable to sleep at night. I was induced to procure and try a bottle of your Swedish Bitters, and can conscientiously say that its use was followed by beneficial results. I can now sit down and enjoy a hearty meal of meat and vegetables of any kind and have gained sixteen pounds in three weeks and can cordially recommend it to others.

Yours respectfully,

PE-RU-NA

This is a new remedy, originally compounded and introduced to the medical profession and the public at large by S. B. Hartman, M. D., of 307 Penn Ave., Pittsburg, Pa., who has prescribed it to over 40,000 patients, and in every case with the most gratifying success.

Its effect upon the system is entirely unlike that of any other remedy, and is the only medicine needed in almost every disease to which flesh is heir—Epilepsy (Falling Fits) being the only exception. In this PERUNA should not be used. In Constipation and Diseases of the Female Organs and Bladder, MANALIN should be given with it. PERUNA is composed of purely vegetable ingredients, each one, according to medical authors, a great remedy in itself.

Dr. Hartman has succeeded in extracting the active principles from these ingredients and in combining them into one simple compound, which at once coincides with the VIS MEDICATRIX NATURA in every disease, and the work of restoration commences with the first dose. There is not an organ that it will not reach nor a disease it will not cure. For particulars send for a pamphlet.

WHAT IT WILL DO.

Fifty cents enclosed in a letter and mailed to JOHN D. WATTLES, 725 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, with a request that the Sunday School Times be sent to you, will result in your receiving that paper for three months. The Sunday School Times is a large 16 page weekly paper, and is used by many thousand teachers. You will at least wish to try it for three months, if you are not already a subscriber. At the end of three months, if you feel that your investment has not been a good one, the publisher will send the money back to you. The Scholars' Quarterly, published at the same office, would help your scholars. Its beautiful double-page colored map is alone worth the price of the book. Send seven cents for a specimen copy.

Do you know of any better time to attend to all this than just now as you read this notice?

—General Beaver seems to be burdened with high honors. They come entirely too fast. He is now spoken of as Secretary of Agriculture, as soon as the bill creating that position is signed by the President. But it will be impossible for him to be both Governor and Cabinet officer at the same time. It is too much to expect him to furnish brains for the entire country.

General Beaver's Reception.

After a week of exciting activity during which some of the most momentous events of his life occurred, General James A. Beaver, the Republican candidate for Governor, returned on Saturday night to his home in this place. A call had been made for citizens who were proud of the high honor bestowed on him to assemble at the depot to give him an enthusiastic welcome. We confess that, considering the inclement condition of the weather, the throng that assembled exceeded our highest anticipations. As the train drew into town citizens, under the command of Capt. S. H. Williams, formed in double rank in front of the Bush House, and the General, escorted by Mr. William Shortlidge, President of the Beaver Club, marched through the line of men, who rent the air with cheers as they passed along.

The enthusiastic citizens then proceeded to the Court House, where General Beaver paused at the door and shook hands with many of his old familiar friends who were so glad to see him back again. The seating capacity of the Court House was not sufficient to contain the vast throng of citizens and many were compelled to stand. After a lively and inspiring air from the Pleasant Gap band, Mr. Shortlidge mounted the rostrum and took charge of the meeting with the following introductory remarks:

"We meet here for the purpose of adding our approval to the proceedings of the State Convention which recently convened at Harrisburg. I regret my inability to address you, as my feelings prompt me. I entertain one consolation, however, in which you will agree with me, and that is, that it don't require much of an orator to inform you who will be Governor Hoyt's successor. That gentleman is present in the person of a distinguished citizen of this Commonwealth, aye, of this great Nation, our friend and neighbor, General Beaver. I am authorized to invite our townsman, A. O. Furst, Esq., to extend to him our hearty congratulations, as well as our cordial and friendly welcome." Applause followed his speech.

Mr. Furst stepped forward, facing General Beaver, and began his speech in low, earnest tones. His voice grew louder as he proceeded. He said he had no formal speech, but "there is my speech," he continued, extending his hands toward the audience. He alluded to the high honor which had been conferred on the General since he had gone forth from his home on the preceding Monday. Then followed a touching allusion to the fact that the people of Bellefonte and Centre county could implicitly trust General Beaver; that they had trusted him when, seventeen years ago, they went forth under his command to take part in the battles of the rebellion. General Beaver, he said, had left one limb on Southern soil as an evidence of his liberal spirit toward the South and now the people of his State will elect the part that still lives to be their Chief Executive. The declaration made by the General to the convention, that he had given no pledges, Mr. Furst declared to be unnecessary; that the people would trust him without that. He then extended his hand to the General in token of welcome. The applause during his speech was very enthusiastic.

During the progress of the meeting the handsome countenance of General Beaver wore an exceedingly serious expression. It was evident that he felt deeply the spontaneous enthusiasm and genuine earnestness of his welcome. The tones of his voice were deep and affecting; sometimes broken with emotion impossible to suppress. He spoke of the many tokens of kindness he had received from friends and neighbors since, twenty-six years before, he had come to this place a mere stripling just out of College. Many of these he still cherishes in his memory, the authors of which perhaps have forgotten them. He accepted the nomination from a mere sense of duty, although he doubted if it would be an advantage to him personally. He would only value the glory and honor attaching to it as he could share it with his friends in Centre county. This county has sent forth many illustrious sons, among them Bigler, Packer, Burnside and Hale. He could not hope to gain such great honor as that in which these names are held, but he would do his best. If elected Governor his home would be temporarily broken up, his business relinquished and many strong ties sundered; therefore if his nomination should not be ratified at the polls he would be happy to remain at his home in Bellefonte, which he considers the most beautiful town in the State, if elected he will go forth at the call of duty. His remarks were received with cheers.

President Shortlidge declared the meeting adjourned; the band rendered a beautiful selection and again the throng of people pressed forward to grasp the General's hand. Thus ended a very warm and earnest reception.

Stormstown Signals.

STORMSTOWN, May 12, 1882.

MR. EDITOR: Why is it we have so much trouble with this mail route and our mails in general since the letting last July? It has been changed several times, and some half dozen different mail carriers put on the route, and at the present time the postmaster has the delivering of the mail to Port Matilda under his own supervision. At present all the mail (with the exception of that intended for this office) is being carried on the Tyrone, Centre and Lewisburg railroad, and should the attempt succeed to take the mail for this office from Scotia it would be a great inconvenience, as it would require two days for a letter to reach Bellefonte and three days for one to return. The route has been grossly misrepresented for the special benefit of certain parties. Furthermore, it is and always has beem the case for some old broken down huckster and political pigmy to take these routes (and particularly this one) cheaper than he can carry them, and then about half perform the contract.

Dr. G. W. Kline has located here in the practice of medicine and appears to be a first class gentleman in every respect.

There is a portable saw mill in our valley, brought here from Mifflin county. It is owned and operated by Mr. Daniel Ramer, and is doing an excellent business. By the way oak timber is slashed around by it you would imagine it had been at work a long time.

The Rev. Beyer, of this place, has disposed of his carry-all and purchased a very fine top buggy.

Mr. P. W. Burket, who moved to Tyrone last fall, has returned to this town with the full determination to make it his everlasting abode. Well, Porter, we welcome you back and willingly forgive you for leaving us this time, but warn you never to do so again. Porter's return will score one more vote in this township for Governor Beaver.

It is a noticeable fact that our stores, shops, &c., are all doing an increased business over last year. Mr. J. H. Griffin now gives his entire attention to his store. The Tow Hill ore banks, although almost two miles away, have undoubtedly contributed much toward this increased business prosperity.

The wheat is not an average crop in this valley this spring. Some fields are very good while others are poor.

I believe that Philipsburg is the banner town in this county in the growth of its business and the number of buildings in course of erection. It contains the finest store that I have seen in Central Pennsylvania—that of Gray, Wolfe & Co. The building in which it is located is of brick with marble corners, facing both Main and Presqueisle streets, and is 50 feet wide and 150 feet deep. The interior is handsomely furnished and for convenience cannot be excelled. The tops of the counters are of highly polished marble. The establishment employs ten clerks, among whom I noticed several pretty ladies. Mr. I. V. Gray, the senior member of the firm, is from this valley and was in business in this town four years ago. Major Wolfe, the second member of the firm, is from Snow Shoe, and was formerly of the firm of Wolfe, Potter & Co. They are both good business men and true Republicans. I believe Mr. D. W. Holt is the company. He is well known as one of the best business men in Pennsylvania, and has been extensively engaged in the coal and lumber operations of this county a number of years past.

CORPORAL.

Almost Barbarians.

We call the attention of Sunday-school missionaries to the following from the Sabula, Clearfield county, correspondent of the DuBois Courier. It is sufficiently near home to attract the attention of missionaries of this section.

"We have not had preaching, Sunday school or divine worship of any kind in Sabula since last November. It seems like sarcasm to read about the interest and anxiety of the different churches for the salvation of souls when we have here a locality from DuBois to Winterburn, from Home Camp in Union township to Hickory school in Hudson township, a territory about ten miles square, so completely ostracized from religious influences that it is a great wonder we do not degenerate into a mass of barbarians."

The following has been handed us for publication. Its touching words and tender sentiment properly express the spirit which should actuate our observance of Decoration Day:

GENERAL ORDERS.
No. 6.

HEADQ'R'S, DEPARTMENT OF PENN'A,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
No. 1037 CHESTNUT ST.
PHILADELPHIA, May 6, 1882.

COMRADES: Tuesday, May 30, will be observed as our Annual Memorial Day, when you will go out to the graves of our forty thousand soldiers, who silently bivouac within the borders of Pennsylvania, and decorate them with the fresh flowers of the spring time.

In more than a thousand burial grounds in our State; in the crowded cemetery of our city, in the quiet graveyard of the village, in the shade of the valley, in the sunshine of the hillside, rest our soldier dead, brought from the fields of their glory, where they fell in the battle's storm, or who, stricken with wounds or wasted with disease, came back from their campaigns to be "mustered out," and to sleep their last sleep amidst the scenes of their childhood, among kindred and friends.

Remit entirely the cares and labors of life for the day, and devote it to our beautiful and impressive commemorative ceremonies.

Diligently seek out every comrade's grave in our State, however humble, however secluded; plant above it the flag for whose honor he died, now the standard of a Nation, united and prosperous. It is but a simple act, but the spirit that prompts it is significant.

No elaborate monument, no bronze tablet records the heroic deeds, the patriotic services, the unselfish sacrifices of those, at whose graves we pay our floral tribute. But, comrades, as you stand beside these passionless mounds, there will arise vivid memories of the ardent, brave, courageous, genial and generous ones who lie beneath them.

To them life was dear, the ties of home sacred, the hopes of the future bright, but moved by the purest patriotism they voluntarily relinquished all for their country's cause, realizing well the hardships to be endured, the perils to be encountered, the prospects of life that would be blasted.

And yet these, whose graves we shall decorate, are but a few of the mighty hosts of the fallen. Legions rest upon the war fields of the South, in the glades of the forest, by the streams along which they fought, on the hills on which they bled; and the sun of our Memorial Day will set upon their graves, unwatched and undecorated, save by the wild wood flower and the untrained vine.

In a million desolate homes, North and South, there are grief and mourning for the volunteer who came not back from the battle, with the tattered flag under whose folds he marched away in the pride and strength of vigorous and hopeful youth.

The services of Decoration Day, are not, then, for vain display, but have a higher and nobler purpose, in reminding us of the priceless ransom paid for the integrity of our Republic and its institutions.

May all our people participate in the beautiful ceremonies. May the young, especially, be impressed with meaning and significance. May we, moved by the sad memories awakened, return to our homes at the close of the day, thrilled with a purer patriotism, incited to a truer devotion to our country, and with a firmer determination that ours shall be the most perfect "government of the people, by the people, for the people," and that our warrior dead shall not have died in vain.

By command of
J. M. VANDEESLICE,
Department Commander.

THOS. J STEWART,
Assistant Adjutant General.

The Curb Market.

A very large proportion of the residents of this place will be pleased to learn that the curb market will open for the season next Saturday morning, May 20. The experience of the past few summers has made this institution very popular among town people, and we believe it is advantageous to those who desire to sell produce. They secure cash for what they sell, the buyer purchases his vegetables fresh from the virgin soil and the obnoxious middle man who must reap his own profit is excluded from the transaction. We hope the farmers will come in large numbers and bring their freshest and best butter, eggs, spring chickens, rhubarb, lettuce and everything that the present very limited supply of the dairy and farm will permit.

Sudden Death.

We are informed of the sudden death on Monday night at the residence of Mr. Barnhart, two miles east of Bellefonte on the Jacksonville road, of Mrs. Sadie Harter, daughter of Mr. David Solt, a merchant and also the postmaster at Zion. Mrs. Harter has been in delicate health and subject to sinking spells for some time, although no immediate danger was apprehended. On this occasion ether had been prescribed by the attending physician. One of her attacks of illness came on during which she expired, although the exact cause of her death is not known. She was a widow, her husband dying only a short time ago. Her death will be much lamented.

—People are shy of printers because they make a business of "setting up jobs."

The State College.

The sub-committee of the committee appointed to investigate the affairs and management of the State Agricultural College, held their fourth meeting at the St. Cloud Hotel, Philadelphia, on Thursday evening. Senators Alexander and Mylin, and Representatives Hall and Roberts, of the committee, and Professors Smith and Hamilton, of the College, were present. The last meeting was held at Harrisburg, and subpœnas had been issued to a number of persons to come before the committee and tell what they knew about the State College. Among them were General Beaver, the president of the board of trustees; Judge Orvis, a trustee; Leonard Rhone, Master of the State Grange; James F. Weaver, J. G. Larrimer, John I. Rankin and others, but not one of them put in an appearance. Professor Hamilton was asked a few questions in regard to the original subscription to the College fund, and this constituted the business of the evening. Professor Smith stated that he was present merely as a looker-on, and was not examined. "I believe we have annouced to everybody to come and tell us what they know," said Senator Alexander despondingly, "but nobody appears." The committee waited until 10 o'clock and then adjourned. Another meeting was appointed to be held at the same place this morning.

—Numerous new improvements have been made recently in the brewery owned by Mr. Lewis Haas at Roopsburg. Among those which are most noticeable are six patent beer pumps which will force beer any distance. Another improvement is a patent beer cooler to keep beer at a refreshingly low temperature all the year around. Mr. Haas takes great pride in the perfect equipment of his brewery and is always the first to add the latest new and improved appliances Most of the work incident to the business of the brewery devolves on Mr. William Haas, a son of Mr. Louis Haas, who is a very energetic young man. One thousand barrels of beer are now in stock at the brewery. The quality of the beer manufactured by Mr. Haas is highly appreciated by those who indulge in such drinks, and dealers in this vicinity will find it to their advantage to leave their orders with him.

—The Undine and Logan hose companies of this place appear to be laboring under some uncertainty in regard to the exact manner in which they will spend the Fourth of July. Both companies have received urgent invitations to join their brethren in Altoona and Tyrone in properly celebrating the glorious day, and the members of each company are almost equally divided in regard to accepting the invitations, with a small majority in favor of Altoona, which we suppose will eventually be decided upon by both companies. To prevent all trouble, however, it might be well for those in each organization who desire to go to Altoona to do so, and vice versa those in favor of Tyrone.

—The Watchman maliciously states that only about a dozen citizens of this place attended the Harrisburg convention and that no enthusiasm was manifested in Bellefonte over the nomination of General Beaver. Lest there there may be some who are not acquainted with the Watchman's reputation for lying we will say that the Bellefonte delegation to the convention numbered over forty, and as to the enthusiasm, why the people were so chuck-full of it that a Beaver campaign club was organized and officered within five hours after the announcement of the General's nomination had been received. Now let the Watchman invent another.

—There are a large number of small boys in this place in daily violation of an important borough ordinance. They station themselves on the banks of the creek and with the aid of a rubber arrangement propell stones at the harmless swallows that skim over the surface, often killing them. It is the duty of the police to arrest such violators of the law and they will do so if the offense is repeated. Mayor Powers will not find himself capable of much sympathy for such youthful offenders when they are brought before him.

—The meeting of the Mite Society at Mrs. John T. Johnston's last night was one of the most pleasant and successful that have yet been held. The weather was not as favorable as it might have been, but notwithstanding that fact over a hundred people were in attendance, including a large number of males, the latter having turned out nobly on this occasion. Mrs. Johnston, assisted by her daughter, entertained in her usual agreeable manner. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. James Sommerville's.

Personal Pencilings.

J. G. Love, Esq., departed Friday morning for Philadelphia.

Mr. Harry Sayre went to Snow Shoe on Thursday on business.

Rev. Crittenden started away Friday morning on a two weeks missionary trip.

Mrs. Harry Hicks, of this place, departed Friday morning to visit her sister in Chester, Pa.

Our townsmen, J. W. Cook and E. C. Humes, tarried for a short time in Lock Haven Friday.

Mrs. J. G. Harris, of Lock Haven is visiting at the residence of Wilbur F. Reeder, Esq., of this place.

Mrs. John Alexander, of Unionville, is visiting among her friends and relatives in Bellefonte.

Mr. Cyrus Weaver and wife are in Harrisburg, Mrs. Weaver intending to remain about two weeks.

Miss S. Ohnmacht returned on Monday from attendance on the great musical festival in New York.

Mrs. Wm. P. Wilson returned to her home in this place on Thursday, after an absence of several months in Florida.

Miss Mary Lyon, daughter of our popular townsman, S. S. Lyon, Esq., departed on Monday for Pottstown to spend a few weeks among her friends in that place.

Cold Weather of 1847.

An Altoona man, while engaged in conversation on Monday delivered himself as follows about the weather on a certain day in the summer of 1847: "Why," said he, "on the 16th day of June in the year of 1847, my uncle was engaged in plowing in the field when a terrible hail storm came up, which frightened the horses so much that they ran into a large pond close by. Before my uncle could get them out the ice had frozen to their limbs and he was nearly stiffened, the atmosphere was so sharp. In the afternoon the weather moderated to such an extent that uncle hitched up to continue the ploughing, but before evening such a violent snow storm came up that he could not see the lead horse and was compelled to postpone his work to another day." Will there be a repetition of that memorable day during June, 1882?

—The great success of the ovation to Gen. James A. Beaver on Saturday evening was due to the effort of the very competent committee having the affair in charge. The committee was composed of Clement Dale, S. D. Gray, S. H. Williams, C. F. Cook and J. Kyle McFarlane. Mr. Dale, the chairman, labored very assiduously, and reaped his reward when he witnessed the brilliant success of the evening's proceedings. This committee deserve the thanks of all public spirited citizens.

—A very fine crayon portrait of Dr. E. I. Kirk, recently of this place and now of Charleston, West Virginia, is hanging in the drug store of his brother, Dr. Miles Kirk. It is the work, we are informed, of Miss Sallie Fisher, of Loveville. As a work of art it shows evidence of genius and skill. Miss Fisher has unmistakable talent as an artist and with perseverence can rank among the best artists in the land.

DIED.

PENNINGTON.—On Monday, May 8, 1882, near Fillmore, Centre County, Willie, only son of Henry and Harriet Pennington, aged nine years, ten months and twenty days.

Willie was an unusually bright and interesting boy, and his departure would leave his parents unconsolable did they not know that he now sings among the angels. His last sickness, though exceedingly painful, was endured with unmistakable fortitude. When sinking rapidly yet able to speak feebly, he said, "Dear papa, take me in your arms just once more." All that skill, love and prayer could do were done, but the ruthless tyrant, Death, claimed him for his own. His cold hand was laid upon him and he withered under his blighting touch. Now that he has gone his parents and friends feel but too deeply their loss. His death is sadly mourned by his numerous friends. Gentle and submissive he was endeared to all who knew him. Weep not, then, for him. Although he is shut forever from your sight; yet how infinitely better is his condition than ours. The large concourse of sympathizing friends in attendance at his funeral showed how highly he was beloved by all who knew him. The writer had an intimate acquaintance with him, having been his last teacher.
